The above engraving was made for the Society in 1836 and was the work of John Cousen (1804-1880), a famous English engraver of landscapes and bookplates. It was originally designed for the Society's Diploma and served that purpose until a few years ago, when the Diploma was discontinued and the design adopted for the book plate and Certificate of Merit of the Society.

THE REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

It is proper at the end of each year for the President to submit a report, and I therefore wish to present the following summary of the affairs of the Society in 1933.

First, in regard to membership—we have added 524 members in 1933, and lost 659 members, making a net loss for the year of 135 and a total membership of 3547.

As to our activities, we have carried through our regular program successfully and have increased the number of activities in some departments. Our year started with the lecture series of five lectures, one more than usual, in January and February, and we also co-operated with the Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania in a course for judges and exhibitors at flower shows in this building in January. In March we were very busy with the Philadelphia Flower Show, and again we tried to further the interests of the Show by giving a luncheon for distinguished guests on the opening day. Later in the year we were grieved at the death of the President of the Philadelphia Flower Show Association, Mr. John P. Habermehl, an active member of our Council.

In May and June we co-operated with the School of Horticulture for Women in Garden Days, and were happy to give our members the additional privilege of visiting the beautiful garden of Mr. J. Franklin McFadden. Our Peony and Spring Flower Show was held in conjunction with the Rutledge Horticultural Society on June 2nd and 3rd, thereby following the custom of lending our support to a local gardening organization in a spring show for mutual benefit.

During the summer, the Library and Mr. Rust's departments were our main activities, although many members called at the office or wrote for information about gardening problems, the formation of and programs for garden clubs, lists of lectures, book and magazine articles on special subjects, etc. In connection with the Library, evening hours have been instituted this winter and the Library is open each Tuesday until 9 P. M.

The Dahlia Show was held with the Bryn Mawr Horse Show on September 29th and 30th, the only drawback being the muddy condition of the aisles in the tent. The Hardy Chrysanthemum Show was held on November 1st and 2nd, here in this building, and it was followed on November 15th by the Annual Meeting. One hundred and thirty-six members attended the meeting and seemed to enjoy it and to be pleased with the information they secured from the Question Box which was the special feature. We were fortunate in having excellent horticultural and botanical authorities present to answer the questions.

The Society awarded one gold and three silver medals to gardens in the suburbs of Philadelphia in 1933.

There have been 82 meetings in our Council Room, 931 visitors to the rooms (exclusive of those attending meetings) and 1365 Library visitors. Mr. Rust has visited 58 gardens, has given nine gardening talks and has assisted in judging twelve flower shows, in addition to many office interviews, letters and advice over the telephone.

Besides co-operating with the Garden Club Federation in the judging course, we have sent delegates to their annual and semi-annual meetings and our Secretary was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Executive Board of the National Council of State Garden Club Federations held in Philadelphia, October 4th. We have also been represented at the recent Plant Quarantine Conference in Washington and at other meetings of horticultural interest.

The arrangement with the magazine HORTICULTURE has continued to work satisfactorily and our relations with the horticultural societies of New York and Massachusetts have been most cordial. We have again exchanged gold medals with those societies, and have given our trophy cup or garden club plaque to fifteen gardening organizations.

We have given $200.00 to the School of Horticulture for their work, in addition to our financial support of Garden Days. We contributed $30.00 toward planting Washington Memorial Trees on the East River Drive and have contributed $100.00 to the fund administered by Cornell University to fight brown rose canker.

I am happy to report that the Society ended 1933 without a deficit and with a fair sized balance to apply to 1934, in spite of the $4,000.00 decrease in our income from the original estimate. In closing, I should like to mention that we have had some nice gifts of books to the Library and floral prints for our walls, and we are also grateful for the plants and flowers generously supplied by Council members and others.

C. FREDERICK C. STOUT
President.

ANNUAL MEETING

NOVEMBER 15, 1933

The Annual Meeting of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in the auditorium of the Insurance Company of North America Building, 1600 Arch Street, Philadelphia, on Wednesday, November 15, 1933, with the President, Mr. C. Frederick C. Stout, in the Chair.

Announcement was made of the re-election of the following members to the Executive Council to serve for a three-year term, beginning January 1, 1934; Mrs. William T. Elliott, Mr. Fitz Eugene Dixon, Mr. George L. Farnum, Mr. Fairman R. Furness, Mr. Samuel S. Pennock, Mr. William J. Serrill, and Mr. C. Frederick C. Stout. Mr. William Warner Harper and Mr. Thomas W. Sears were elected to serve until December 31, 1934, to fill unexpired terms. (The Council is composed of twenty-one members, seven of whom are elected each November for a three-year period. If vacancies occur during the year, they are filled by the Executive Council at any regular meeting but must be confirmed at the November election.)

The death of Mr. John P. Habermehl, a member of the Executive Council since 1924, which occurred on July 28, 1933, was deeply regretted.

The President reported briefly on the condition of the Society and his remarks were followed by the Secretary's report which presented a summary of the year's activities in greater detail. (See Secretary's report.)

A Question Box was the special feature of the meeting, and after the short business session the members were invited to write and hand in questions. About fifty questions were received, and the Secretary referred them to horticultural authorities who answered them from the platform. Dr. E. P. Felt, Chief Entomologist of the Bartlett Tree Research Laboratories in Stamford, Connecticut, and formerly New York State Entomologist, answered questions about insect pests and diseases, including the Dutch Elm disease, the Japanese Beetle, and the Hawthorn fire blight. Dr. J. Horace McFarland gave information about Roses, including cause and remedy of black spot, care of rose gardens, names of particular varieties, etc. Dr. Edgar T. Wherry, of the Botanical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, answered questions about plant relationships, soil acidity and plant pathology, while Mr. David Rust, the Society's gardening consultant, advised in regard to transplanting trees and shrubs, the care of perennials and annuals, garden soil, covering plants for the winter and other practical gardening matters.

An exhibit of unusual plants was another interesting feature of the meeting.

MRS. THOMAS NEWHALL
Member of Executive Council, 1928-
Honorary President Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania

SECRETARY'S REPORT FOR 1933

We have had a struggle this past year to prevent our membership from dropping unduly, and to keep our expenditures in line with our income. This, certainly, is not unusual these days. However, this report will show that the Society is still in a healthy condition.

On January 1, 1933, we had a total membership of 3682; since then we have gained 524 members and lost 659, resulting in a net loss of 135 members and a total membership of 3547. Among the losses, twenty-eight were caused by death; one of them being Mr. John P. Habermehl, a member of the Executive Council for nine years, President of the Philadelphia Flower Show, Incorporated, and one of Philadelphia's leading florists.

We hope that many of the members who have had to drop out on account of economic conditions will rejoin us later. We wish we could have continued to carry them on our rolls, but we have no special funds for that purpose and it seems only proper that all our income should be used to benefit every member equally. As soon as times improve, we intend to make a special effort to interest more persons in becoming life members, for we are not gaining new ones to take the places of those who have died. We shall welcome any suggestions as to ways of doing this.

I do not intend to review in detail all of our activities for 1933 but I am glad to report that they have been very successful. If any of you have ideas as to how to improve them or would like to suggest plans for additional privileges to work into our program, please let us have them, for we certainly need the co-operation of every member. The officers and the few members who represent the Society on the Executive Council and the various committees are directing the activities to the best of their ability, but if our Society is to perform the real service to horticulture that many of us hope for, it will have to come from a larger number of active members.

The 1933 Flower Shows have been most creditable. Our classes in the Philadelphia Flower Show last March were ably managed by a committee headed by Mrs. Joseph P. Sims. Mr. Charles Willing designed and executed the beautiful Walled Garden which was the Society's special exhibit. We are extremely fortunate in having Mrs. Sims and Mr. Willing again donate their services to the Society for the 1934 Flower Show, and they already have their plans well under way. The Spring Show, held with The Rutledge Horticultural Society in June, was most satisfactory, and our Dahlia Exhibition at the Bryn Mawr Horse Show in September was very beautiful but the exhibitor's enthusiasm and the spectator's pleasure were marred by the muddy aisles in the tent. The Hardy Chrysanthemum Show, on November 1st and 2nd, was exceedingly interesting and there was a gratifying attendance of twice as many people as last year. We had unusually fine weather for all our Shows which helped swell the attendance records.

However, the weather was not so kind to our Garden Days. There was only one really pleasant Saturday afternoon for these events, and it was a great disappointment to our members to have to forego many of the visits they had planned and an even greater disappointment to the Committee of the School of Horticulture whose revenue from this activity suffered severely. The Society, by an advance arrangement with the School, contributed $850.00 for the privilege of allowing our members to visit all the gardens listed on the School's program, and we also made an extra donation of $200.00 to the work of the School this year. With the economies contemplated for 1934, it may not be possible for the Society to make a large contribution, much as we might like to, and it may be necessary to curtail the number of Garden Days or to work out some different plan of handling this activity, which we realize is a very popular and enjoyable one to many members.

We were proud of our lectures, and sorry that more of our members did not attend the evening ones which were a new feature designed for those who cannot come in the afternoon. Dr. Edgar T. Wherry has kindly given us the text of his excellent talk on "Eastern Wild Flowers and Their Cultivation," for use in the current Year Book.

The Library has continued to grow under the supervision of Mrs. Lloyd, who is an authority on gardening books. I hope all members are aware from the recent notices that the Library will be open on Tuesday evenings this winter. We want to make its resources available to all of the members, and this move is for the benefit of those who cannot visit the Library in regular office hours.

There is also a change in Mr. Rust's schedule. Hereafter, he will not make outside engagements on Mondays but will be at the office for personal and telephone consultation except at the time of Flower Shows, for, as you probably know, he is manager of exhibitions as well as being the Society's gardening consultant. He asks me to remind you that much valuable work can be done in and for the garden in winter, and that he is still available for visits to gardens on other weekdays.

HORTICULTURE speaks so well for itself that it hardly seems necessary to put in a word for it. However, I should like to remind members to look at the Society's advertising space on inside of back cover for announcements of general interest. The magazine has become, with the December 1st issue, the official organ of The Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania. A supplement of a few pages is included in the first of each month's issue devoted to the Federation news. This will be an attractive feature to all of us, for each of us is a member of the Federation through our membership in this Society. The special issue with the Pennsylvania Federation's news will be distributed only to Pennsylvania subscribers.

We have exchanged gold medals with the Horticultural Societies of New York and Massachusetts, and also have been happy to give our plaquettes and medals to various garden clubs and horticultural societies for award at their shows.

We have had most pleasant relations with the organizations which use our rooms as a meeting place for their Executive Boards. Among them are The Pennsylvania Forestry Association, Council for Preservation of Natural Beauty in Pennsylvania, The Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania, The Philadelphia Flower Show, School of Horticulture for Women, The John Bartram Association and various garden club committees. We are very glad to extend the hospitality of our rooms to allied organizations, the only restriction being that one of their officers shall be a member of this Society.

Upon the recommendation of the Committee on Garden Awards, the Society awarded a gold medal to the beautiful estate of Miss Caroline S. Sinkler, "The Highlands," in Ambler, and silver medals to the gardens of Mrs. Charles Day, of Chestnut Hill; Mr. and Mrs. J. Clifford Rosengarten, of Villanova, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Frederick C. Stout, of Ardmore.

An important event in which the Society was deeply interested was the Plant Quarantine Conference called in Washington on October 25, 1933, by Dr. Lee A. Strong, of The United States Department of Agriculture, to hear any objectors to his policy in regard to making some of the provisions of Quarantine 37 more liberal. The majority of the two hundred people who attended represented nurseries or nursery interests and opposed any changes, perhaps largely because of the beneficial aspect of the present quarantine system to their business. Representatives of the Bureau of Entomology and of various Forestry Associations asked not only that the Quarantine should not be made more liberal but that it should be made more stringent. Dr. J. Horace McFarland and I represented this Society, and presented a statement from the Executive Council expressing approval of Dr. Strong's position in advocating greater liberality and greater fairness to all by abolishing present discriminations against amateurs as a class. Representatives of The Garden Club of America and the National Council of State Garden Club Federations made similar statements. Dr. Strong's preliminary statement made it quite clear that he would be guided solely by the facts in relation to the danger of the importation of plant pests and that he did not intend to enforce the quarantine as a tariff.

In closing, I wish to thank the members who have given us books for the Library and the floral pictures, over a hundred years old, which are now on the walls of the reading room, and also those who from time to time have given us plants and flowers for our rooms.

JOHN C. WISTER,
Secretary.

 For Eminent Service In Horticulture

REPORT OF EXHIBITION COMMITTEE FOR 1933

The Exhibition Committee is happy to report that the Society has produced, or has been intimately associated with, the production of four successful Flower Shows in 1933.

The first of these was the Philadelphia Flower Show at the Commercial Museum, 34th Street below Spruce, March 27th to April 1st. The Show was a mass of beautiful color, but when one studied it in more detail, it was found to be remarkable also for plant material and pleasing design. The floor plan was carefully worked out by Mr. Thomas W. Sears, landscape architect, who deserved much credit for the harmonious effect which was achieved. The attendance during the week was about 90,000. Each member of the Society received one free ticket to the Show and the price to the general public was 75 cents. The Society, as usual, took charge of the Amateur and Garden Club classes. Perhaps the most interesting of the exhibits in this group were the roadside stands, which were staged most attractively and with great attention to detail by six of the local garden clubs. The West Chester Garden Club won the first prize of this Society, a cash award, for their exhibit, and in addition the Gold Medal of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The Society's special exhibit was a walled garden, beautifully designed and executed by Mr. Charles Willing, a Philadelphia architect. An orange and yellow color scheme prevailed among the flowers and fruits in the garden, and a lovely effect was gained by their use with the green foliage against the background of white walls.

The Peony and Spring Flower Show took place in Rutledge, Pa., on June 2nd and 3rd, and was the joint effort of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Rutledge Horticultural Society. Fine Peonies and Roses were shown, and there was also an abundance of other early summer flowers. A special feature was made of the class calling for rare plants or varietal seedlings or special importation of plant or flower. Although in 1933 the Society was fortunate in finding a temporary solution of its perennial problem of securing a suitable place for its June Show by the invitation of the Rutledge Horticultural Society to join forces with them, the Committee is sorry to state that it is no nearer than ever to finding a permanent exhibition hall. The rooms in the building at 1600 Arch street, where the Hardy Chrysanthemum Show is held each November, have been spoken of for the June Show, but the Committee does not consider them, nor their central city location, desirable for a summer exhibition. If, in the interests of economy, it is found necessary to omit one of the customary flower shows in 1934, the Exhibition Committee feels that the June Show will be the best one to leave out. It was not possible to estimate how many of the Society members attended the 1933 Show in Rutledge, but on account of the increasingly large number of suburban Spring Shows, there is a growing tendency for the amateur gardener and exhibitor to concentrate on the Show in their own neighborhood and to make no special effort to go to the Society's exhibition which may be held at a considerable distance. This is another reason why the June Show might be admitted with propriety.

The Dahlia Show was held in Bryn Mawr on September 29th and 30th, again in conjunction with the Bryn Mawr Horse Show. Foreign introductions and new American varieties of dahlias aroused keen interest among the experts on this flower, while well-grown specimens of the older and better-known dahlias gave equal satisfaction to the average visitor. Some fine commercial exhibits, which included the large range of autumn flowers, added to the attractiveness of the Show, and artistically arranged displays of incredibly handsome vegetables had a decided appeal of their own.

The Hardy Chrysanthemum Show followed on November 1st and 2nd, in the rooms adjacent to the Society's quarters in the Insurance Company of North America Building, 1600 Arch street. The Arthur Hoyt Scott Horticultural Foundation of Swarthmore College staged a very fine exhibit of these hardy flowers, which included 112 varieties. Correct labeling added to the educational value of this display. Elmer D. Smith & Company, of Adrian, Michigan, sent a collection of their newer introductions, and local growers staged large exhibits of their best varieties. The Committee is pleased to notice an increasing number of exhibits in this Show each year, as they feel that the late-blooming hardy Chrysanthemum is particularly suitable to the Philadelphia climate and adds color and charm to the garden at a time when the earlier flowers have almost completely disappeared. The attendance of 689 was just about double that of last year.

The Committee was proud of the flower arrangements which were exhibited at all of the 1933 exhibitions. A high standard of excellence has been reached in this art, and the beautiful combinations of color and varied use of plant material gave very real enjoyment to those viewing the shows.

A detailed list of the awards made at the four exhibitions of the Society, and a list of the awards made by the Society at flower shows of other organizations, follow.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE L. FARNUM,

Chairman.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON GARDEN AWARDS FOR 1933

The following awards were made to gardens of members in 1933, upon the recommendation of the Committee on Garden Awards:

A Gold Medal to Miss Caroline Sinkler for her estate "The Highlands," at Ambler, Pennsylvania. This home has an historic background which is responsible somewhat for the atmosphere and charm of the house and garden, but it is really to Miss Sinkler that credit is due, for reclaiming it with such perfect taste and skill.

It was built by Anthony Morris in 1796, Georgian in type, and bought by George Sheaff in the early part of the nineteenth century and owned by his family for over a hundred years, when it was acquired by Miss Sinkler. It was described by an early writer as "a respectable mansion of stone," and the author doubtless went on to tell of the beautiful old trees, the crenelated walls and the "careless unstudied sweetness" of the whole. The parts of the walls that were destroyed by time and were the boundary of the garden have been replaced so that you cannot tell the new from the old. Besides being a beautifully designed garden with spacious lawns and box-bordered walks containing valuable specimens of both trees and shrubs and garden statuary, it retains all the charm of the old days while offering the finish of the new.

A Silver Medal to Mr. and Mrs. C. Frederick C. Stout for their attractive place at Ardmore, Pennsylvania. These grounds form an example of both skill and taste in landscaping and planting. Situated on Glenn Road overlooking the Mill Creek section, they are planted in such a way as to suggest extensive acreage and seclusion. Several small gardens in front of a spacious terrace gives a sense of intimacy, from which a sloping lawn surrounded by beautiful trees and shrubs extends to a broad flight of stone steps, which in turn leads to a pool and water garden below. Every natural feature has been taken advantage of. In the spring bulbs and wild flowers are naturalized through the woods in great profusion. The swimming pool, tennis court and garden house are most attractive features and have been artistically planned. The interest and taste of the owners are apparent in every detail.

A Silver Medal to Mrs. Charles Day, "Standen," Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania, for an attractive garden so intimately tied-in with the beautiful residence as almost to seem a part of it. From the doorway extends a rectangular grass plot, bordered on the left by a massive vine-clad masonry wall, surmounted by a vine-hung pergola, and on the right by a greenhouse of unusual design filled with rare and interesting plants. Beyond the grass plot a beautifully planted winding walk ascends to the pergola level and enters the woodland beyond, while to the right, the sward on a descending slope extends to a sheepwalk, and faces a prospect of hills and forest trees. The planting—herbs, shrubs and trees—is in exquisite taste, evincing marked artistic restraint. The whole possesses an intimacy and sense of seclusion that are quite unique.

A Silver Medal to Mr. and Mrs. J. Clifford Rosengarten for their estate "Woodley" on Mt. Moro Road, Villa Nova, Pennsylvania. A charming residence on the side of a hill, surrounded by the lovely rolling country once part of the estate of the late Moro Phillips, is well deserving the Silver Medal of the Society. From its porches and terraces, through man-made vistas in the woods, one glimpses the beautiful Chester Valley. The gardens are laid out in terraces, and the utmost skill has been used in their planting. Whether in spring, summer or fall they are always a mass of bloom, which bears the closest inspection. The rose garden is noted for the quality of the flowers, and a great variety of climbing roses has been used effectively. The planting at the entrance and around the house is both interesting and distinctive. Interest and enthusiasm on the part of the owners are very evident and add to the pleasure of awarding it the Silver Medal of the Society.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM J. SERRILL,

Chairman.

REPORT OF THE LECTURE COMMITTEE FOR 1933

Five lectures were presented before the Society in 1933, all of them in the auditorium of the Insurance Company of North America Building, at 1600 Arch Street. Arranged chronologically, they were as follows:

January 17, 3 P. M. "Flower Arrangement," demonstrated by Mrs. C. Frederick C. Stout, of Ardmore, the wife of the President of the Society. Mrs. Stout's proficiency in floral arrangement is admitted by all who have seen the entries made by her in Philadelphia and New York Flower Shows and the numberless prizes won by her wherever she has exhibited. In her lecture she explained basic principles and generously shared little accessories employed by her in constructing exhibits and subsequently answered many questions. The attendance at this lecture was 425, the largest of any lecture of this series.

January 31, 8:15 P. M. "Rock Garden Plants," (Illustrated) by Miss Anne Wertsner, of Germantown. Miss Wertsner is head of the Floriculture Department of the School of Horticulture for Women, Ambler, Pa. She received much experience and inspiration from Mrs. Richard Haughton in her famous rock garden in Paoli, so that the practical instructions in her talk as to how to build rock, wall and moraine gardens were as professional as her descriptions of the proper plant material.

February 7, 3 P. M. "Eastern Wild Flowers and Their Cultivation," (Illustrated) by Dr. Edgar T. Wherry, of Swarthmore, Pa. Dr. Wherry is Assistant Professor of Botany in the University of Pennsylvania, and for many years he was connected with the United States Department of Agriculture, where his specialty was Plant Ecology—the relation of plants to their environment. He has conducted extensive experiments on wild flower cultivation. We have Dr. Wherry's kind permission to publish the main points of his talk in the current year book under the title of Acid Soil Gardening, as reprinted from "New York Gardens," November-December, 1932, by permission of the publishers.

February 14, 8:15 P. M. "The Plant Life of the Caucasus," (Illustrated) by Dr. William Seifriz, of Philadelphia. Dr. Seifriz, a professor of Botany in the University of Pennsylvania, paid three visits to Russia for the purpose of studying plant life there. He presented a very interesting discourse, and his graphic description of the forms of plant life, particularly those of the mountains, were illustrated by beautiful pictures.

February 21, 3 P. M. "Roses," (Illustrated) by Mr. R. Marion Hatton, of the Conard-Pyle Company, West Grove, Pa. Mr. Hatton is Consulting Rosarian of the American Rose Society and well qualified to speak on this popular flower. At his former home in Rhode Island, Mr. Hatton grew a large collection of roses and derived practical experience through the test of many years. He has written many articles about roses for Horticulture, the American Rose Annual, the California Rosarian, and the Australian Rose Annual.

The Committee arranged two evening lectures for the benefit of those members who could not come to afternoon lectures, but the response was so limited, an attendance of only 83 at one of them, that it was deemed best to discontinue evening talks.

Respectfully submitted,

ANNA ELLIOTT,
(Mrs. William T. Elliott),
Chairman.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE FOR 1933

The Library Committee takes pleasure in reporting the increasing usefulness of the Library to those interested in Horticulture, both members of the Society and non-members. It feels that the move into more adequate and commodious quarters has been more than justified by the gratifying increase of visitors. Thirteen hundred and sixty-five persons including a number of non-members, used the Library in 1933 as compared to nine hundred sixty-nine in 1932. The circulating privilege is reserved for members but all persons interested are invited to use the Library for reading and reference.

The Library is open on weekdays from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. and on Saturdays from 9 A. M. to 12 noon. An exception is made on Tuesdays during the winter season when the Library remains open until 9 P. M. for the benefit of members who are employed during the day. The Librarian is glad to be of assistance to visitors.

The Library contains 3670 volumes and subscribes to the best of the American and English horticultural periodicals. It was fortunate in obtaining among its accessions for 1933 several old and interesting English gardening books. These include:

"Nieve herbball," by D. Rembert Dodoens, 1578.

"Herball, or generall historie of plantes," by John Gerarde. 1633.

"Theatrum botanicum," by John Parkinson. 1640.

"Compleat gardeners practice," by S. Blake. 1664.

"English gardener," by L. Meager. 1670.

"Flora," by John Rea. 1676.

"New system of agriculture," by John Laurence. 1726.

"New principles of gardening," by Batty Langley. 1728.

"Natural history of Carolina, Florida and the Bahama Islands," by Mark Catesby. 2 vols. 1754.

The Committee wishes to acknowledge with thanks the interesting and valuable books that have been given to the Library through the generosity of the following members:

Mr. Arthur C. Emlen

Mr. S. Mendleson Meehan

Mr. S. W. Fletcher

Mrs. Alan H. Reed

Mrs. J. Norman Henry

Mr. Albert D. Taylor

Mrs. Horatio Gates Lloyd

Dr. Edgar T. Wherry

Mr. J. Franklin McFadden

Mr. John C. Wister

An outstanding purchase was "Genus Lilium," by Elwees which was made possible by a generous gift of the four member clubs of the Garden Club of America—the Four Counties, the Garden Club of Philadelphia, the Gardeners and the Weeders.

"THE HIGHLANDS"
Miss Caroline S. Sinkler, Ambler, Pa.
Gold Medal, 1933

The Committee also wishes to thank Mrs. J. Norman Henry for the rare and beautiful Thornton's flower prints which she has given and which add so much to the attractiveness of the Library.

Respectfully submitted,

MARY HELEN WINGATE LLOYD,
(Mrs. Horatio Gates Lloyd),

GARDEN DAYS

In 1933 The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the School of Horticulture for Women again held joint Garden Days. The program included thirty-five attractive gardens in suburban territory surrounding Philadelphia. They were visited on five afternoons in May and three in June, all of the visits taking place on Saturdays with the exception of a group of interesting gardens in the Chester Valley which were opened on Wednesday, May 24.

In addition to the joint Garden Days, members of the Society and their friends were invited by Mr. and Mrs. J. Franklin McFadden (Mr. McFadden is a member of the Executive Council), to visit the Garden of Ithan, their beautiful Main Line estate, on Tuesday afternoon, May 4th, an opportunity which was enjoyed by between seven and eight hundred garden enthusiasts.

The Society wishes to express its appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. McFadden and to the persons who so generously opened their places for the joint Garden Days.

Editor's Note:—For a number of years The Society has co-operated with the Pennsylvania School of Horticulture for Women in the Garden Day activity. By this co-operative arrangement members of the Society were admitted free to the gardens opened to the School, and in view of the loss of revenue to the School from such admissions, the Society paid certain definite sums to the School each year.

We are sorry to announce that we have been unable to arrange to continue such co-operation and that, therefore, in 1934 our members will not be admitted upon presentation of membership card to the Garden Days of the School of Horticulture. We hope, however, that our members—many of whom are also interested in the School—will continue to attend these days and pay the regular admission fee, thus helping the School by their attendance. Complete lists of gardens available can be secured directly from the School of Horticulture, Ambler, Pa.

Before the negotiation of the co-operative policy with the School of Horticulture, The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society had its own Garden Visiting Days, usually not more than one, two or three in a season. Going back to this older method, the Society in 1934 has arranged for the opening of a number of gardens for our members, and to these gardens our members will be admitted upon presentation of their membership cards and they will be allowed the privilege of taking friends with them. The gardens, however, will not be open to non-members unless they accompany members with tickets.

CONSULTANT IN HORTICULTURE

Mr. David Rust, the Society's horticultural expert, visited fifty-six gardens of members during 1933. The following is a list of subjects about which he was most frequently consulted, arranged according to the frequencies of the inquiries in 1933. The 1932 figures are given for comparison to show the changing interest of members.

In addition to visiting gardens, Mr. Rust has had many consultations in the office, has given advice over the telephone to a large number of members and has also given horticultural advice to several others in writing.

We should like to remind members once more that Mr. Rust is at the service of all members. He will visit members' gardens to give advice, the only charge being for traveling expenses, and he is available for consultation at the office on Mondays, and on other days by appointment.

THE GARDEN CLUB FEDERATION OF PENNSYLVANIA, 1933

The past year has been full of activity for the Federation. Judging and Exhibitors Courses were held simultaneously in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, January 23-26, inclusive. Sixty-five persons registered for the course in Philadelphia, 46 taking the examination, while in Pittsburgh, 65 took the examination. The speakers and their subjects were:

Judging and Schedule Making. Mrs. Wheeler H. Peckham.

Exhibiting, Staging and Judging Straight Classes. Mr. John C. Wister.

The Principles of Flower Arrangement. Miss Lucile Grant Smith.

The Judge's Place in the Community. Mr. Richardson Wright.

On Tuesday, March 28, 1933, the third Annual Meeting of the Federation was held at Strawberry Mansion. Mrs. Reed presided and presidents and delegates of 32 clubs were present. The Admissions Committee reported that eight clubs had been admitted during the past six months. Reports from Standing Committees and from all clubs represented followed, after which Mrs. George L. Harrison awarded the Gold Medal of Achievement for the year to the Four Counties Garden Club: "For their beautification of the roadsides, for their installation of the Azalea Garden at the Scott Arboretum, for their food gardens for the unemployed, for their success in hybridization and floriculture, and for their work in the advancement of horticultural knowledge." Four Honorable Mentions were awarded as follows: First Honorable Mention, the Kittanning Garden Club; Second Honorable Mention, the Norristown Garden Club; Third Honorable Mention, the Carrie T. Watson Garden Club; Fourth Honorable Mention, the Carlisle Garden Club. Following the election of officers Mr. Francis R. Cope gave a talk on "The Remnants of Virgin Forest in Pennsylvania. Shall we Preserve them as a Memorial to William Penn?"

In the evening a lecture on "The Care and Arrangement of Cut Flowers" was given by Miss Anne Wertsner, followed by an illustrated lecture on "Charleston and Magnolia Gardens" by Mr. Jay V. Hare.

The Semi-Annual Meeting was held at State College, December 11-12, 1933. Fifteen clubs were represented in spite of bad storms which kept at home many who had registered. The interesting and helpful lectures provided by State College made this meeting particularly noteworthy.

In November the federation accepted the generous offer of Mr. E. I. Farrington, editor, to carry garden club news as a supplement to HORTICULTURE. An editor was appointed by the Federation and on the first of each month this supplement goes to each Pennsylvania subscriber as the official organ of the Federation.

The Federation now numbers 65 Member Clubs with a membership of approximately 7800 persons.

1933 REPORT OF THE GARDEN COMMITTEE OF THE STATE FEDERATION OF PENNSYLVANIA WOMEN

At the beginning of its fourth year of definite organization, the Garden Committee of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women has chairmen in thirty-three county and multi-county organizations who are establishing garden groups in their various clubs. Among these groups, now numbering close to three hundred, flower shows are a habit, yard and garden contests a community custom, and the all-day garden institute a popular means of stimulating the study of plant life. Publicity is being handled with increasing efficiency, garden libraries are being developed, and well-kept scrap-books for the orderly preservation of miscellaneous gardening information are being featured.

The observance of garden book week is spreading throughout the State. At such a time a representative of the local garden group goes over the garden and nature book shelves in the local library with the librarian, suggesting additional books and often helping to find the means for providing them. Often an expert amateur gardener is at the library at stated hours to aid readers in locating information. Newspapers have given splendid co-operation so that the garden corners in the libraries have become very popular spots.

At the annual meeting of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women each year a conference led by the State Chairman is held for leaders of garden groups, when methods for better organization are discussed, various types of programs and activities are suggested and a friendly and stimulating exchange of personal garden experience takes place. At the 1934 State Convention to be held at the Penn Harris Hotel, Harrisburg, in October, a dinner conference, open to all clubwomen of the State who are interested in gardens, is being planned.

The Garden Division booth at the Philadelphia Flower Show in March, 1933, was visited by over eight hundred women from our clubs. It was planned by Mrs. H. C. Parry, of Langhorne, and a committee of women from the counties near Philadelphia, and hostesses from these county organizations, as well as the State Chairman of Gardens, were on hand each day.

The aim of the State Chairman has been to establish personal contact with as many of the garden groups in the Club as possible. Each group is asked to extend its influence by fostering new groups and by establishing friendly and helpful contact with groups already organized. As gardeners are friendly people, with a wholesome and helpful outlook on life, we feel that this network of garden enthusiasm which is being spread over the State is of benefit both to the women who have a part in planning it and the members of the communities which it reaches.

Respectfully submitted,

ALICE PECK KAISER,

(Mrs. Frank A. Kaiser),

ACID SOIL GARDENING

By EDGAR T. WHERRY

Associate Professor of Botany, University of Pennsylvania

Reprinted from New York Gardens, November-December, 1932

The majority of our garden and crop plants have come to us from the Mediterranean region, where the soils are dominantly neutral or slightly alkaline, and our ordinary horticultural and agricultural practices have been correspondingly developed with the aim of maintaining the soil in this reaction-condition. When the plants show evidences of malnutrition, the soil is often assumed to have become "sour," and lime, manure or compost, which react alkaline and accordingly neutralize acidity, are extensively applied. The results of this procedure are favorable in many, but by no means all cases; and it is now recognized that plants differ in their response to reaction, some thriving only when the soil is thus neutralized, others being tolerant of acidity, and still others actually preferring an acid reaction in their soils. In the last group fall, notably, a number of species of American origin, such as the Potato, Sweet-potato, and Tobacco among crops, and Fringetree, Kalmia, and Sweetbay among ornamental plants. For the successful cultivation of plants of this character, special horticultural practices are necessary.

In developing an acid-soil garden, the first step is obviously to ascertain the degree of acidity represented in the plot to be allotted to the purpose. Observations as to the weeds present are often taken as an index of the acidity of the soil, but it is not always safe to depend on them. The common tradition that the appearance of moss is a sign that a soil has become acid is unreliable, because some kinds of moss grow luxuriantly on neutral or even slightly alkaline soils. The presence of sorrel, widely accepted as a sign of sourness, is also a poor guide, for although it is true that this weed becomes most abundant in acid soils, it likewise thrives in some places under neutral conditions. The only way to be certain whether a given area is acid or not at the start is to make chemical tests.

The methods in which electrical measuring instruments are used to this end are too complicated for horticultural work, but those in which the degree of acidity is determined by the color of a dye or "indicator" are practical, even for a gardener without technical training. The simple "one-indicator method," using brom-cresol purple dye, yields useful information as to the degrees of acidity favored by ordinary acid-soil plants, and the account of it published by the writer in 1926 in Bulletin No. 4 of the American Horticultural Society is accordingly reprinted here:

"Outfit needed: Pure water; vial for making soil extract; small porcelain or white enamel slab or dish; rubber-capped pipette ("medicine-dropper"); stirring rod; towel; and dropping bottle containing a dilute solution of brom-cresol purple indicator. All the apparatus should be well washed with the pure water before use. In particular, any alkali which may have come from tap water or soap previously applied must be removed.

"Procedure: Mix a small sample of the soil with about four times its volume of pure water in the vial, shake well, and allow to settle for as long a time as convenient (not less than five minutes nor more than 24 hours). Place on the porcelain slab a very small drop of the indicator solution. With the pipette remove some of the clearest soil extract available, allow five or ten drops of it to flow onto the slab and mix with the indicator. On stirring, the whole liquid should take on a pale but distinct color. In case this color can not be readily made out, a larger drop of indicator solution may be used, but the greatest care must be taken not to add a really large quantity of the dye, for if that is done the results are likely to be misleading. Always make observations on a liquid in which the depth of color is only sufficient to be distinctly recognizable.

"Results: If, when the above directions are followed, the liquid on the slab becomes distinctly purplish, the soil is circumneutral; if brownish, it is low subacid; if plainly yellow, the soil has a high degree of acidity."

It may be added that brom-cresol purple indicator solution can now be purchased from dealers in chemicals, the strength usually sold being 0.04 per cent; it comes in vials of 10 cubic centimeters capacity, which cost about 60 cents, this amount being sufficient for several hundred tests. Only soils which yield with this indicator yellow-brown or clear yellow colors are suitable for the cultivation of acid-soil plants. The pure water above referred to is preferably distilled or rain-water; spring water may, however, be used if a preliminary test with a drop of the indicator shows it to be faintly acid (yielding a brownish color).

So far as is known to the writer, there is no commercial testing outfit at present on the market which makes use of the exact procedure just outlined, but there are several based on the same general principle. In these, directions are given to place a pinch of soil in a depression in a small porcelain plate, and to sprinkle an indicator solution directly upon it. If care is taken that the soil is thoroughly wetted with the least possible excess of the solution, these give dependable results. When the liquid shows reaction-number five, usually an orange-brown color, or reaction-number four, a red color, the soil is sufficiently acid for ordinary acid-preferring plants. When, however, the reaction-number is six or higher, the degree of acidity is insufficient.

If on testing the soil proves to be strongly acid at the outset, no special treatment will, of course, be necessary. In most gardens, however, the reaction will be found to be neutral or essentially so, and steps will then have to be taken to increase and maintain the acidity for such plants as require it.

Constructing Acid-Soil Beds

Whenever practicable, it is desirable to dig out the original soil to a depth of at least a foot, and to fill in the excavation with a mixture of some sort of acid humus with about one-fourth its bulk of sand. The latter may be washed river-sand or leached bank-sand, and should be proved free from excess lime by a preliminary test with indicators; if a sample yields a color indicating alkaline reaction, another source should be sought. The humus used must be similarly tested and its possession of an acid reaction be assured. It may consist of bog-peat, commercial peat-moss, or upland peat formed by the disintegration of the leaves of oak trees, mountain-laurel bushes, or various conifers. Rotten wood, spent tan-bark, or thoroughly decomposed sawdust may be substituted, although fresh sawdust, especially that from pine trees, is unsuitable, as the resinous substances present are toxic to plants. The introduction of fresh manure, compost, black leaf-mold, and similar materials must be strictly avoided, because the common tradition that they are acid is shown by testing with indicators to be fallacious.

Provision is also necessary to insure that the acidity of the bed shall be permanently maintained. If the plot is on the summit of a hill, the natural leaching action of the rain will tend to keep the reaction acid. This effect may be nullified, however, if earthworms or other burrowing organisms are abundant, as they bring up considerable lime from the subsoil, and thus destroy the acidity. Their entry will be discouraged if a two-inch layer of soft-coal cinders is placed on the bottom of the excavation before filling in. Sprinkling the bed with hard water will also tend to neutralize the acid, and should be avoided as far as practicable.

When the plot in which acid soil plants are to be grown is located on a slope or at the foot of a hill occupied by rocks or soils of a non-acid character, a barrier may have to be erected to prevent neutralization by the lime and other bases brought in by drainage water from the higher levels. Barriers built of wood are effective at the start, but will ultimately rot away and require replacement. If a stone wall is preferred, care must be taken that the rocks themselves are non-calcareous, and that neither mortar nor portland cement is used to hold them together, because these substances have great neutralizing power for acid soils. Instead, they should be joined by plaster of paris, wetted with a dilute solution of aluminum sulphate (two ounces of commercial aluminum sulphate to a gallon of water).

In cases where it is impracticable to dig out the original soil, or where only a slight increase in acidity is called for, surface applications of acid materials may be made. A thick mulch of oak leaves, rotten wood, peat-moss, etc., will sometimes acidify a bed sufficiently, the rain or the sprinkling-water applied leaching out acids and carrying them down to the roots of the plants. Such a mulch has the additional advantage of helping to maintain desirable moisture conditions in the underlying soil, although care must be taken that it does not become so compact and water-logged that it prevents the access of air to the soil surface.

Instead of a mulch of organic matter, acidifying chemicals may be applied, the most promising thus far tried out being tannic acid and aluminum sulphate. In both cases commercial grades are to be used, and it is most convenient to keep and apply them in the dry form. Tannic acid is sold by dealers in tanning materials and should cost about $10.00 per hundred pounds. The best way to find out where to obtain aluminum sulphate is to inquire at a local water-works, where this substance is used for clarifying the water. If the engineers have located a nearby source of supply, so that the freight charges are slight, this should not cost more than $5.00 per hundred pounds.

Either of these chemicals is to be applied to the surface of the soil, mixed in shallowly by means of a rake, and then dissolved by watering thoroughly but slowly, so that the water percolates through rather than runs off the plot. The greatest care must be taken that large lumps do not lodge against stems of roots, as burning is then likely to occur, and the plants be injured or killed.

The amounts to be used in a given case vary with the conditions. If the soil is slightly acid at the outset, and only a moderate increase is desired, as little as one-fourth pound per square yard of surface area may be sufficient. If, on the other hand, the original soil is alkaline owing to the presence of free lime, as much as ten pounds may be required for the same area. The most desirable procedure is to first test the soil to determine its initial acidity, make an application of the acidifying agent, wait a few days to insure that action has taken place, and then repeat the test on soil from the level occupied by the bulk of the plant roots. If the increase in acidity proves to have been insufficient, the application can be repeated until strongly acid conditions are attained. It will also be well to make subsequent tests at intervals of a month or two to make sure that the acidifying effects of the chemicals added remain in evidence.

Even though the acidity is brought to and maintained at the proper point by one or another of the procedures above outlined, the soil may become low in available plant-foods, and fertilization be called for. Experiments carried out by Dr. Frederick V. Coville of the U. S. Department of Agriculture on blueberries and other acid-soil crop plants have shown the following fertilizer mixture to be especially satisfactory: Five parts cottonseed meal, two parts ground rock phosphate or bone meal, and one part sulphate of potash. After thorough mixing, this is to be scattered over the plot at the rate of one-quarter pound per square yard of surface area. Commercial fertilizer mixtures in which the nitrogen is carried in the form of sulphate of ammonia, and which react strongly acid, may be used instead; but those which contain nitrate of soda or free lime should of course be strictly avoided.

Glossary of Technical Terms Used in Preceding Article

Acid—a substance exhibiting certain chemical properties, including a sour taste and the ability to change the colors of various dyes in a definite direction.

Alkali—a substance exhibiting as its characteristic properties a soapy taste and an ability to change dye-colors in the opposite direction from acids.

Base—a chemical compound of a metal with oxygen, more or less alkaline in character and possessing the power of neutralizing acids. The bases most often met with in horticultural practice are potash, or potassium oxide, and lime, or calcium oxide.

Calcareous—containing free lime; limestone and similar rocks, cement, mortar, and hard water are all highly calcareous substances.

Indicator—a dye the color of which is changed in a definite direction by the addition of an acid, and in a reverse direction by an alkali.

Neutral—the chemical condition in which equivalent amounts of acid and alkali are present, so that no features of either are exhibited.

Neutralize—to bring to a neutral condition by adding together equivalent amounts of acid and alkali.

Reaction—a general term to cover acid, alkaline, and neutral conditions. The following special reaction terms are often found useful:

Circumneutral—a reaction-condition departing little in either acid or alkaline direction from neutrality.

Subacid—a moderate degree of acidity.

Mediacid—a high degree of acidity.

Reaction-numbers—according to the usage of physical chemists, reaction can be expressed by numbers; of these most commonly used, 4, 5, and 6 represent progressively diminishing degrees of acidity; 7 corresponds to neutrality; and 8, 9 and 10 represent increasing degrees of alkalinity. These numbers are used in connection with many commercial testing sets.

AZALEAS

By JOHN C. WISTER

Although popular in Philadelphia gardens for a century or more, Azaleas are still not enough appreciated for their great value in our climate. There are many kinds which give us a season of bloom from April until late June and great variation in height, in growth and type of flower as well as color. The earliest species to bloom, poukhanensis, is of a rather unattractive magenta color, but one which some people think can be used at some distance from Forsythia to give a contrast of color. From this species which blooms with the Forsythia to the species indica macrantha, variety J. T. Lovett, which comes in rose season, is a long blooming period, during which time there are always some species and types to be had in bloom.

The last week of April or the first week in May the lovely pale pink of our Southern mountain species, vaseyi, and a large but similar colored species, schlippenbachii, from Korea, are in bloom. Our native Pennsylvania species nudiflora is much later and Azalea calendulacea, the Flame Azalea of the Southern Alleghenies, later still, coming in late May.

With the Flame Azalea bloom the numerous Ghent and Mollis hybrids which were so popular in the days before our plant quarantine, which then for some years were not available in American nurseries but which today are again to be found in some nursery lists. The number of varieties is almost endless but among the best of these is Daviesi which is nearly white, Dr. Charles Bauman, Coccinea speciosa, Narcissiflora and William III. Of the much larger Mollis hybrids may be mentioned Baron de Rothschild, Comte de Quincey, Isabella Van Houtte, Anthony Koster, Hugo Koster and Nicholas Beets. All these varieties and many more are to be seen in the new arboretum at Swarthmore College.

Another group of Kurumes which have become popular only very recently are the Kurumes. They are evergreen and are dwarf growing, and by some have been suspected of not being fully hardy as far north as Philadelphia, but even this cold winter does not seem to have hurt them. They are offered both as seedlings and as named varieties, of which Bridesmaid, Coral Bells, Daybreak, Lavender Queen, Peach Blossom, Salmon Beauty and Snow are some of the best known.

The two most common Azaleas to be seen in the spring months around Philadelphia are Azalea amoena and hinodegiri. They are most brilliant in color, but probably the less said about the color of the first, at least, the better for it is of a magenta shade which is very hard to combine with other colors in the garden and it really looks well only when surrounded by a great deal of green. Hinodegiri is a deeper red and is popular with people who like such strong colors more than the softer pinks or flame.

A few large specimens of Azalea ledifolia alba are to be seen in old Philadelphia gardens; perhaps the largest of these are on Chestnut Avenue near the Reading Station in Chestnut Hill and anyone who has seen these specimens cannot fail to wish to have these plants. Another very large specimen, although not quite as large, is on Wissahickon Avenue near Upsal Street in Germantown, the plant measuring four or five feet high by six or eight feet or more across.

In addition to the white form of ledifolia there is a variety called magnifica which has a pink spot on the upper petals, and also one known under the name of lilacina and various other names, which is a lilac pink, not a harsh magenta as in the case of amoena, and a color perhaps equally difficult to use. It is a lovely variety, however, if properly used with green and white near it.

A species coming into prominence within recent years is kaempferi, the Flame Azalea of Japan. A great mass of this species is planted against Hemlock Hill in the Arnold Arboretum and has been famous there for a quarter of a century or more. It again is rather a harsh color unless much green is used with it. Of recent years a number of hybrids of this species have been introduced by Koster & Company at Bridgeton, New Jersey. They are of softer colors in shades of pink, ranging between pink and scarlet. The varieties Fedora, Louisa and Zampa may be mentioned.

As all gardeners know, Azaleas require acid soil and that is the common condition of soil around Philadelphia so that in most places no special preparation is needed. An addition of peat moss or leaf mold is desirable in all Azalea plantings and where possible the plants should be watered during dry spells in the summer. Partial shade will not hurt Azaleas but although they will withstand deep shade they cannot be expected to bloom freely unless they get a fair proportion of sunlight. Skilled gardeners may grow the species from seed and some of the varieties from cuttings or grafts, but most gardeners will prefer to propagate plants by layering, which is accomplished by merely bending a branch under the soil, putting a stone over it and leaving it for two or three years when it will be well rooted. Plants may be moved in early spring or during September and October or even November.

All Azaleas will benefit by a generous mulching of leaves, oak leaves being considered the most desirable. Other than this they need no winter protection and can be used in many different situations and exposures.

THE MORRIS ARBORETUM AND ITS FUTURE

By DR. RODNEY H. TRUE

Chairman of the Department of Botany at the University of Pennsylvania and Director of the Morris Arboretum

*Reprinted from "Proceedings at the Dedication of the Arboretum,"
June 2, 1933*

We meet today on this hilltop to signalize an act of great actual and symbolic significance. We are to take part in an exercise that transforms a home into an institution devoted to learning, an exercise that bears witness to the expansion of an ideal representing personal happiness and private welfare into one as broad as the happiness and welfare of humankind. A scene made lovely to delight the makers, today begins to wear the aspect of a great public good, dedicated to a search for truth amid surroundings of beauty.

Today the fact that the will and the aspirations of men and women are the most vital and effective things in the world is being demonstrated. A brother and sister, Mr. John T. Morris and Miss Lydia T. Morris, made their home here and, being lovers of beauty and eager friends of living things, surrounded their home with trees and shrubs from far countries that they had found pleasant.

As passing years warned them that physical powers wane and must finally cease, this brother and sister thought undoubtedly that their joy, limited to a lifetime, might be prolonged through the generations by some lasting benefaction to their fellow-men that might have a fair chance to contend with the centuries. Bearing in mind that knowledge lives from man to man and that ideas can thus outlast stone and brass, they resolved that their home should become an enduring memorial, an institution of learning where as generations of men come and go the truth should be sought in the midst of the harmony of beautiful surroundings. Thus would be proved daily that the truth sought through a study of Nature cannot contradict itself, whether it speaks with the voice of science or with that of beauty.

Undoubtedly the vitality of institutions of learning amid the ups and downs of more material things seemed to them to be well illustrated in the great University that grew from the seed planted by the far-seeing Franklin. Perhaps the chance for long life and useful service for their school may well have seemed to them increased if it were to be allied with that venerable institution. Hence, this week we are celebrating the union of the Morris Arboretum with the University of Pennsylvania. Officers have been named and staffs have been appointed to take charge of the important duty of transforming the home of Mr. John T. Morris and Miss Lydia T. Morris into an institution of learning attached to the University. The bond connecting the two institutions was the interest in plants found alike in the Arboretum and in the Department of Botany, and, in accordance with Miss Morris' will, through that Department, her old home, Compton, and her nearby country estate, Bloomfield, now collectively the Morris Arboretum, are joined to the University of Pennsylvania.

As we now see the Arboretum beginning to assume its new functions, our attention turns toward the future. What objectives are to be sought? What vision will struggle to condense itself into reality as the years come and go?

Fortunately, the seeing minds that created the scene about us and the one that finally devoted it to its new generous purposes remain to guide us. In her will Miss Morris indicated the goals toward which she looked—goals that must remain before the eyes of those who are to strive to make her vision come true. She directed as a first duty that the Arboretum should be maintained; hence, that what had been begun should continue to develop. Here, then, we hope to see brought together as many kinds of the trees and shrubs of the world as the limited area of the place and the consent of the climatic conditions of our latitude and longitude may permit to grow. Already so many of the vegetable citizenship of Eastern Asia are to be found here as to make the Chinese plant student feel fully at home, and in some parts of these grounds the American must look carefully if he is to find plants of his own land. It will be an important task to bring in more of our native trees and shrubs. With the Asiatic witch hazels our own species must be made acquainted. Some of our native spruces must also try to maintain themselves among the many exotic species now here. Some of our own plants when brought here will offer very interesting problems to the botanist. Some may find themselves too far north here at the Arboretum; some may be too far south. The reasons ruling geographical distribution of species must some time be capable of analysis. When other arboreta, north and south, can be brought into a chain of connected observation stations, an increase of information must result.

Not only will these and similar problems of plant dynamics come within the range of experimental test, but the specimens themselves will be of untold value to all who are interested for any reason in tree and shrub production. We are now embarking on a reforestation policy in America with several objects in view. Trees for timber, trees to protect watersheds and to prevent erosion, trees for fibre and other technical uses, trees and shrubs for use in ornamental plantings, are now being sought and are being experimented with. Any authentic collection of these plants in variety will be a place to which users will go for information about new types and for the study of old types under definite conditions. Landscape artists will find in trees and shrubs some of their richest material. With such they paint pictures in spring blossoms, in summer greens and in autumnal reds, yellows, russets and browns. Here a great collection of woody plants, brought from many parts of the world, will offer a study in the elements that are at the disposal of these artists.

Nor are the values of such a collection exhausted by the uses above indicated. There is a use available to every interested lover of plants in such a collection as that already here. Who can tell what an old tree or a burning bush, or a fragrant, flowering shrub may mean to him who has opened his mind to Nature? Such a value many will find as the years go by in this collection of trees and shrubs.

In her will Miss Morris clearly set forth as a second main objective a graduate school of Botany in which research shall be carried on. In making this rather unusual provision for the use of the resources of the Arboretum, Miss Morris seems to have desired to do something distinctive as well as pleasing and directly useful. Many others before her had left their treasures for the entertainment of the public in parks and pleasure grounds, and had too often seen them lightly accepted and in the end neglected. The public in general is inclined to take for granted what is offered by the giver. What has been slowly and lovingly brought together and bestowed with the wish that a blessing may follow is oftentimes unthinkingly and unappreciatively appropriated. Perhaps she had seen people indifferent to the claim for protection that beauty should give and had resented torn lilacs and mangled dogwoods. She may have wished to offer something more than the beauty of trees and shrubs. Such could be seen in many places open to all who are blest with eyes that see. Perhaps she felt that to aid the lesser number in a quest perhaps more difficult than the pursuit of beauty would be a rarer contribution. If such had been her line of thinking, she might well have been led to the thought of a school for research. At all events, she has laid the foundation for an unusual thing—a place and surroundings where quietly and unobtrusively earnest young men and women and their preceptors may search diligently and earnestly for a better understanding of the ways of life as seen in plants. And how surprisingly alike the physical life of plants and that of man! The singer of old spoke truthfully when he declared that "all flesh is grass."

So the second great objective of the Morris Arboretum is seen in the dedication of a portion of its resources to botanical research. Now the subject of Botany has many sides. To some people it means a study of plant relationships and correctly to bestow a Latin name on a plant, the final aim. This is a worthy objective. Through such a study, thoughtfully pursued, one sees in plant life a vast family of beings related to each other, but differing in their ways of expressing life as they face its varying conditions. Such a view gives one a vast respect for the almost limitless resources of life and to follow the great story, chapter by chapter, from alga to orchid, is to witness one of the stateliest dramas of time.

So here are to be assembled, for research, plants in great variety from different continents in the hope that unknown types may be described, named and made known to science. Perhaps those already known in more superficial ways may be given closer scrutiny and may tell their story more fully. But many of the obscurer things of life are not to be learned by unaided observation. The microscope must be employed to gain a knowledge of structure and to unveil the mysteries of the many things going on in the associated parts. The methods of physics and chemistry give the physiologist his tools for the study of how plants live, move and have their being. In time there should be built here well-equipped laboratories supplied with apparatus and materials for the study of these problems.

Already the attic over the garage has been turned into a laboratory for the study of some of the more difficult chemical problems of plant life. Here an Allison magneto-optical apparatus has been set up and gotten into use. Here the speed of the coming and going of light rays tells the presence of almost inconceivably minute traces of compounds and some of our young botanists, like the physicists and astronomers, are beginning to speak confidently of quantities small beyond human realization. By means of this new method we hope that some of the problems of plant physiology may be brought nearer to solution and a clearer understanding gained of the ways in which plants utilize the constituents of the soil solution. Should this hope be fulfilled it will not be the first time that truth has dawned in an attic. While the real researcher, true to his instinct, will research in an attic, we foresee in the future an adequate building designed and constructed on the most approved model, to which this and other laboratory work may be moved when the attic stage has been outgrown. Then, on a basis even more favorable than that on which research at the Arboretum now rests, earnest inquirers may prosecute their search for the truth.

But, aside from these more fundamental studies into the ways of life in plants, there are many more sharply defined aspects of botanical investigation that may be studied under favorable conditions.

Supplementing the large and growing collection of living plants inviting direct study, there is being developed an herbarium of dried plant specimens that is already growing in numbers more rapidly than the number of the living. Not only is the collection to contain the herbarium record of the trees and shrubs now growing at the Arboretum, as seen in winter, in flower and in fruit, when possible, but contributions from other sources have begun to add very significantly to the wealth of material at hand.

By becoming a participant in the last Rock Expedition to the borderlands between China and Tibet, the Arboretum has acquired thousands of dried specimens from a region that has never before been scientifically explored or has been but inadequately visited. Moreover, thousands of kinds of seeds have been collected, including those of Rhododendrons, Primulus, and other plants, from which, with the facilities of the Arboretum for growing and testing plants, we hope to obtain many types yet unknown to horticulture, and perhaps in cases, even to science.

Already the nurseries have begun to receive new species and varieties of trees and shrubs from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, from forest experiment stations, and other agencies, concerned with the scientific study of plants.

I am sure the thought has occurred to you that with materials and specimens, coming from so many parts of the earth diseases may also find entrance in spite of the careful watch being maintained by the National Inspectors at ports of entry. The Arboretum has its sanitarian in a member of the staff who has had abundant experience in detecting and fighting diseases among woody plants. Diseases have been found in the Arboretum, and a study of the causal organisms is being actively prosecuted, and it is hoped that remedial measures may be effective in removing or controlling the remarkably small number of troubles that thus far have been found. The results of these studies will undoubtedly in time aid greatly in controlling diseases of ornamental and otherwise useful plants.

The Morris Arboretum is most fortunately situated in the matter of soils. When the earth's crust in the vicinity of Philadelphia settled into the structure familiar to us now, that part occupied by the Arboretum fell into two different areas; one, that on which the house stands, underlain by schist and quartzite; the other, including Bloomfield on the floor of the Whitemarsh Valley to the northwest, underlain by limestone. Schists gave rise to acid soils here in the higher area, and the limestone developed a neutral soil at Bloomfield. Thus Nature has prepared the conditions for a splendid experiment in Plant Ecology. Here in close contact lie the two great contrasting soil types that go far toward determining the natural distribution of the higher plants. The natural woodlands along the stream offer another area of greatest interest. Here we hope to establish a plant sanctuary for our native woodland flora. Into this preserve will be brought for protection representatives of a rapidly diminishing plant population. Here rare things loving the woods may live on happy terms with the wild birds that have long since taken the place for their own. Plant Ecology will naturally undertake to study the living conditions most favorable to native and introduced vegetation.

The acres of Bloomfield will offer opportunity for the work of the geneticist. In the beginning Adam named the plants and the animals, it is said, but he did not leave knowledge of the names given, hence, Linnaeus had to try to do the job anew and he, with his successors, the taxonomists, have done a wonderful piece of work as the volumes on the shelves of the Botanical Library show. But with the arrival of the geneticist, in a sense creation began anew. By using the methods of the breeder, new types of plants have begun to appear—new fruits, new flowers, new foliage. This new investigator sees before his mind's eye a new type of plant that he wishes to assemble from the multitude of characteristics seen in the group he is interested in. Guided by an ever-widening knowledge of the laws governing life, he patiently sorts, rejects or retains characteristics until in many cases he succeeds in developing a more close approximation to the plant of his fancy. Undoubtedly with the material already at hand, the geneticist would be able to repopulate most of the earth's surface with plants that appeal to human needs or to human pleasures. Surely to assist nature to give birth to such glorious things as our finest flowers, fruits and grains, is a wonderful service. We see aid to such a service in the acres and greenhouses of the Arboretum serving the carefully designed studies and operations of the geneticist.

As we stand here today on this hilltop among the trees and shrubs that other hands have assembled here, we see present beauty. We see a home of beauty-loving people. As we look into the future, we see no less beauty—rather more of it—but we see here a place where Science is striving for a fuller vision of the truth. Young men and young women have come here, some from near and some from far, to take part in this work. Students and teachers—learners all.

NOTABLE TREES AND OLD ARBORETA IN AND AROUND PHILADELPHIA

By S. N. BAXTER, Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, Pa.

Reprinted from Proceedings, Ninth National Shade Tree Conference, New York, September 7, 8, 9, 1933

Aside from her beautiful suburbs, parks and private gardens, Philadelphia and environs holds much of interest for the more enthusiastic plant lovers who seek and appreciate trees that are noteworthy because of their rarity, size, age or possessing historical significance.

William Penn's decree that Philadelphia should be a "greene countrie towne" has also born fruit in the form of the existence of several tree collections, which though not of sufficient pretension to comply with the present day interpretation of arboreta, yet we feel justified in using that term in the absence of a better one and also in paying tribute to those earlier tree lovers who have handed down to posterity the fruits of their labor. These unique tree collections, or notable individual trees, should serve as an inspiration to the present generation to plant trees, be they on the sidewalk, the home grounds or, where space permits, a collection of species of one's hobby or even a woodland.

The subject of the address on "Notable Trees and Arboreta, in and Around Philadelphia" was inspired by the late Ernest H. Wilson of the Arnold Arboretum. About seven years ago I was invited by Dr. Wilson, to whom I had shown the trees about Philadelphia, to address the members of the Horticultural Club of Boston on this arboreal topic. Since then I have added to and had slides made of more specimens, and the collection is the result of observations over a period of twenty-one years with the Fairmount Park Commission. Having directed the taking of a census of the city's street trees also enabled me to locate many notable specimens.

Bartram's Garden

On the west bank of the Schuylkill River, reached from South 54th St., is the botanical garden of John Bartram, generally conceded to be the first in America.

"From Plowman to King's Botanist" would be the fascinating title, were we to undertake to write a book about this early American botanist. In it could be narrated incidents galore for the youth of today, of one who made the best of his opportunities. As a plowman John Bartram is said to have been attracted by the humble daisy. This lowly weed aroused his interest in much the same manner as it captivates children's of today. It proved the spark which, fanned by his eagerness and thirst for learning, kindled into a flame, the warmth of which was felt in two continents and today still burns in places of botanical learning.

America, in the Colonial days, was the source of hidden botanical treasures to the learned European plant students, and Bartram, imbued by his deep interest in plants, was their able and willing agent to collect specimens, not only of plants, but insects, birds, snakes and turtles. As an instance of the esteem in which Bartram is held as a collector, we find Peter Collinson, a London scientist, with whom Bartram corresponded over a period of 35 years, writing him in 1763 as follows: "Thy quick discernment of plants is a knack peculiar to thyself and is obtained by long exercise of thy faculties in that amusement, and is like the 'hare-finders' we see. Some can't discover them if close under their feet; others see them at a distance."

When local fields were combed, excursions into undeveloped sections were made, braving the vicissitudes of primitive modes of travel; of hostile natives and wild animals. It was on such a trip to Georgia, in 1760, that John Bartram found the rare Franklinia and named it Franklin tree, in honor of his friend, Benjamin Franklin. No longer is it to be found in its native habitat, near the Altamaha River, but through persistent efforts of propagators, several fine specimens of this rare tree may be seen around Philadelphia, notably at the Barnes Foundation Arboretum, Merion (planted in 1888), near Horticultural Hall in Fairmount Park, Bartram's Garden, the late Joseph Meehan's homestead, Mt. Airy, and several in Germantown.

The bloom of the Franklin tree (which is really a many branched tall shrub) is like a single camellia—to which plant it is related—with a wealth of golden stamens in the center of ivory white petals, flowering from August until frost, and having an exquisite fragrance. No wonder that the discovery of this plant alone is sufficient to endear Bartram's memory to plant lovers for all time!

Born near Darby in 1699, John Bartram subsequently built his own house on the west bank of the Schuylkill, at what is now the south end of 54th St. "John—Ann—Bartram, 1831" is carved above the upper window on the south side of the house, while on the east side is chiseled his belief: "It is God Alone. Almyty Lord, the Holy One By Me Adord—John Bartram—1770." Time has not erased this tenet, though it has not dealt kindly with the building, which fell into decay, but the Fairmount Park Commission has now restored it and the proper preservation of this historic landmark is assured.

Today one may visit Bartram's Gardens and see the remains of the Lady Petre Pear, grown from the seed sent by Lord Petre, a patron, which first bore fruit in 1763, and for 168 years this veritable Methuselah among fruit trees continued to bear fruit, until it died two years ago. At the north end of this side of the house is a rare jujube tree (Zizyphus jujuba), a native of Syria and beneath it, the watering trough or wash tub, carved out of rock. Near this is a large yellowwood (Cladrastis lutea), with gray bark, resembling a beech, and a Christ thorn (Paliurus spina-christi). Toward the Schuylkill River may be seen a hydrangea, with leaves like an oak, hence named—by William Bartram—oakleaf hydrangea. Nearby are dwarf buckeyes and many are the tall species with stout trunks; a maidenhair tree (Ginkgo) with a trunk 11 feet in circumference, a European plane (Platanus acerifolia) 11 feet in circumference with a buttress 9 feet in diameter; two species of silver-bells (Halesia), old box and many other trees and shrubs.

This garden was purchased by the city in 1891, through the efforts of the late Thomas Meehan, the well-known nurseryman and a member of City Council. It was not until 1923, however, that the tract was transferred to the care of the Fairmount Park Commission. In that year the writer made a survey of existing plants, recording 82 species of trees and shrubs in 47 genera. A survey was made by Thomas Meehan in 1853, and recorded 129 species in 69 genera. To replace these 47 missing species and add others of Bartram's time—gleaned from old catalogs—was immediately started and today there are 211 different species of trees and shrubs. All acquisitions are limited to those listed in early Bartram catalogs. .

In 1777, as the British army was marching from Brandywine to Philadelphia, John Bartram breathed his last. Who knows but the fear that the army would "lay waste his darling garden, the nursling of half a century," may have hastened his death! And when we recall that such celebrities as Washington, Jefferson and Franklin frequented this horticultural show place, when the United States was in swaddling clothes, Bartram's gardens of today may well be included in the places of interest, particularly to plant loving visitors.

Hamilton Homestead, Another Botanical Shrine

Nearby, on the bank of the Schuylkill River, to the north, in what has been, since 1840, Woodlands Cemetery, is another Colonial mansion of horticultural interest. It was the home of William Hamilton, whose gardens were noted in their day. Here it was that the maidenhair tree, or ginkgo, was first introduced into America, by way of Europe, about 1784. This tree, with curious fan-shaped leaf and practically immune to insect attack, antedates all other trees, fossil remains indicating that in the days when terrible lizards inhabited the earth, it grew in both hemispheres. Then came the glacial periods and ice caps wiped it off the earth except in China. Subsequently it was introduced into Japan. A ginkgo here measures eight feet six inches in girth, though the one at Bartram's Garden is larger. Here, too, the Lombardy poplar is said to have made its horticultural debut in America in 1784.

A stump 13 feet in circumference may still be seen of the uncommon Japanese sawleaf zelkova (Zelkova serrata), which flourished here until a few years ago, while nearby smaller trees aspire to attain the same girth. Other notable trees are four English elms, the largest having a girth of 13 feet; a hackberry over 9 feet; an English maple, 8 feet 6 inches; a Turkey oak, 10 feet, with a spread over 70 feet; buckeye, 7 feet; European plane over 13 feet; and a cutleaf beech 9 feet, referred to by Thomas Meehan in his "American Handbook of Ornamental Trees," written in 1853. As evidence of Hamilton's interest in plants, we find him writing in 1796 to Humphrey Marshall (a cousin of John Bartram and to whom we will later refer), thanking him for seed of dwarf horse-chestnut and asking for cucumber magnolia, sweet shrub, spiraea and oaks, while in 1799 he sends Marshall a tea tree and asks in return a Stuartia.

While in West Philadelphia, if you would care to see the largest Japanese pagoda tree (Sophora japonica), (4 feet in diameter), in this vicinity, go to 2527 S. Hobson St. There on the sidewalk, preserved during the World War, when the Emergency Fleet Corporation opened the streets and built homes for the shipbuilders at Hog Island, this early plant immigrant from Japan spreads its leafy arms for 70 feet. It is a member of the pea family, with foliage resembling the locust and its panicles of cream white flowers are borne in late summer. Smaller trees may be seen at Belmont Mansion, George's Hill and Woodford in Fairmount Park. On City Line at the Barnes Foundation Arboretum may be seen the oldest Franklin tree, planted in 1888; also fine specimens of cedar of Lebanon, Cercidiphyllum japonicum or Kadsura tree, and Spanish fir.

Let us now visit Fairmount Park, whose 3600 acres constitutes the largest city park in the world. In Horticultural Hall, one of the two buildings remaining from the Centennial in 1876, may be seen one of the finest collections of tropical plants. Notable, are a sago palm, once the property of Robert Morris, first Treasurer of the United States, presented to the Park Commission in 1876; another similar specimen possessed by George Washington in his conservatory at Mt. Vernon; banana trees; huge rubber trees and many other uncommon trees, "the largest in captivity," several of which were procured from the Centennial. A large Cohune oil palm bows its head on the glass dome 70 feet above.

Adjacent to Horticultural Hall are false larch (Pseudolarix kaempferi), cedar of Lebanon, Cedrela, Acanthopanax racinifolia, Franklinia, unusual pyramid type ginkgo, weeping hemlocks, California nutmeg (Torreya californica), Japanese terrey (Terreya nuciifera), and many others to delight the hearts of tree lovers.

Those who love nature at her best should see the Wissahickon section of the Park. A stream, winding six miles through precipitous, rocky, forest-covered slopes, the beauty of which would be difficult to excel, and the rare feature of which is that it is within the limits of a large city and only a few miles from the busy shopping center.

Here and There About the City

School Lane, Germantown, is replete with many fine old trees of various kinds but suffice to cite the largest Cryptomeria to our knowledge. It is on the property of the Misses Mason and its trunk measures about two feet in diameter and height 50 feet. On Dr. Campbell's property is a Franklinia, several kinds of magnolias and a Stuartia.

At "Compton," the estate of the late Miss L. T. Morris, recently bestowed to the University of Pennsylvania as an arboretum, is probably the best collection of hardy plants around Philadelphia, embracing deciduous and evergreen trees and an especially large assortment of shrubs, many of which are rare in cultivation.

Points North

Visiting the northern section of the City we find at the old Wakefield Mansion, Logan, many old trees, the largest of which, a tulip (Liriodendron), has a circumference of nearly 15 feet, measured 4 feet above ground and the buttress at ground is over 14 feet in diameter. Nearby, on York Road, on the old Cope Estate, are many old trees, notably, cedar of Lebanon, a large Chinese white magnolia and cryptomeria.

Near Andalusia, on Byberry Road, are two splendid old specimens of the Swiss stone pine (Pinus cembra). These are on the Hergesheimer grounds. This pine is of slow growth and very little spread. These specimens, although forty feet high—which is considered very tall for this locality—spread only ten feet, the trunks being 15 inches in diameter.

Nearby, on the Morell Estate at Torresdale, may be seen the rare Japanese raisin tree (Hovenia dulcis), 50 feet high, with trunk 8 feet in girth, an unusual size. A smaller specimen may be seen at the Barnes Foundation Arboretum at Merion.

Home of the Kieffer Pear

Besides its many horticultural attractions, Philadelphia holds pomological distinction in being the "birthplace" of the Seckel and Kieffer pears. The former, originating in South Philadelphia more than one hundred years ago, is well known for its excellent quality. But the original tree is no longer to be found.

The original Kieffer, however, is hale and hearty and still bearing, though its existence and location are known to few. On Shawmont Ave., Roxborough, overlooking the Wissahickon Valley, is the old orchard of the late Peter Kieffer where the pear of this name made its debut in pomological society in the early sixties, and whose fame became widespread after it was awarded a bronze medal and certificate of merit at the Centennial Exposition. This pear, though less palatable than the Bartlett, possesses better keeping and carrying qualities and, being far cheaper, is hailed by the housewife for canning purposes.

Peter Kieffer, born in Alsace in 1812, and serving twelve years in the King's garden in Paris, sailed for America in 1834, to seek his fortune. Arriving in New York, he was advised to come to Philadelphia, this city offering the greatest possibilities for a gardener.

In propagating pears it was customary to use as a stock, the Chinese sand pear, whose round, hard fruit has no commercial value. A surplus of these seedlings, not used for grafting, were permitted to grow up and bear fruit. One tree was noticed to possess different fruit, a great improvement over the sand pear from a palatable standpoint, and so Kieffer saved it for observation. The following year more pears were borne of the same improved quality, the number increasing until 1868, when a full crop was harvested and local distribution began, the pear taking the name of its discoverer, Kieffer, who died in 1890.

That Kieffer's interest in plants was not confined to fruits is evidenced from some fine old specimens of ornamental trees which still exist on his old grounds now owned and carefully maintained by D. F. Keely. Along Shawmont Ave., may be seen large beeches, equal to any in this vicinity. Also the remnants of an old hedge of hornbeam, a favorite plant for this purpose in past years. Across the road are several white pines and cypress. Fine rhododendrons and azaleas ornament the lawn about the remodeled house. Perhaps the most noteworthy tree, because it is uncommon, is a weeping pond cypress (Glyptostrobus), regarded as a form of the common bald cypress (Taxodium), from which it varies in having stringy or thread-like foliage, instead of the flat, evenly arranged small needle-like leaves along the main stem.

Plant lovers will find much of interest in a visit to the grounds where Peter Kieffer realized his Alsatian dreams, and a whim of nature gave him a new variety of pear which now bears his name.

Points South and West

Adjoining Philadelphia, toward the south, where local botanists may take pride in directing visitors, are the mammoth sassafras trees on Baltimore Pike, beyond Media, measuring nearly 15 feet in circumference.

Near these, in the old Painter's Arboretum at Lima (planted about 1825), may be seen a cutleaf Norway maple; a Sequoia gigantea or "big tree" of the Pacific Coast, over 40 feet high and 8 feet in girth; a cypress with typical "knees" protruding above the ground; great boxwoods; cedar of Lebanon, exceeding 50 feet in height and trunk 3 feet in diameter; spruce; Bartram and willow oaks; Japanese cryptomeria; magnolias; Zelkova; a yew 12 feet high and 30 feet in diameter; and many others less noteworthy.

Longwood Gardens and Pierce Arboretum a Wonderland

In the same direction, at Longwood, near Kennett Square, are the gardens and palatial conservatories of Mr. Pierre S. duPont, which the owner generously opens to the public. In front is a splendid specimen of the California incense cedar (Libocedrus decurrens). Adjoining is the old Pierce Arboretum, planted about 1800. Here may be seen a large Magnolia cordata, a native of Georgia, the finest of the few growing in this section. It is over 9 feet in circumference. Also a silk tree (Albizia julibrissin), a native of Asia; an empress tree or paulownia, over 15 feet in girth; the stump of a chestnut tree measuring 6½ feet across; large Irish and English yews; English holly and maple; white pine; beech; Norway spruce; sycamore maple—all are noteworthy and will interest the lover of trees.

On the outskirts of West Chester, known as Marshallton, about 25 miles from Philadelphia, is the old homestead and arboretum of Humphrey Marshall, the first American author on trees, who published, in 1785, a list of trees of the United States. Marshall was born here in 1722. He was well advanced in years before becoming interested in botany, and being a cousin of Bartram, may account for his love of trees. Here may be seen trees which tower 100 feet and date back to the Revolution. An American ash is over 11 feet in girth; a sweet gum and cucumber magnolia, 16 feet in girth. The sweet gum is 11 feet through the trunk at the ground. A rare Bartram oak is nearly 15 feet in circumference. Other specimens are buckeye, hackberry, sycamore and sugar maples, larch, ailanthus and Kentucky coffee.

Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa., has recently started an arboretum, where many specimens have already been planted and this arboretum is destined to play an important part in plant collections of the country.

The remains of another old arboretum of interest is that of the late John Evans, near Radnor, and now the estate of W. Hinckle Smith. It was referred to in 1868 by the late Josiah Hoopes as possessing splendid specimens of Douglas fir (Pseudotsuga douglasi), Siberian fir (Abies pichta), Cryptomerias, Chinese fir (Cunninghamia sinensis), and weeping pond cypress (Glyptostrobos sinensis). Thomas Meehan in 1854 also cited many specimens, now unusual, which included fifteen varieties of willows and a Japanese Torreya. Few of these plants remain but the development of the estate includes many fine plants more recently planted and a garden well worth seeing.

Such are some of the arboreal attractions of Philadelphia and environs from which the transient visitor may make selection of preference for visitation if time will not permit the gratification of a desire to see all. Flower gardens are to be encouraged for their beauty and the pleasure they give the owners and those who see them. But they disappear with lack of maintenance. On the other hand, he who plants a tree plants for posterity, for they continue to grow despite neglect.

As we enjoy seeing these specimens and admire the gardening instinct which prompted their planting, we recall and commend to plant lovers Dr. Fothergill's reason for collecting plants as expressed by him in a letter to Humphrey Marshall in 1770: "Perhaps thou wilt be surprised when I tell thee one of my principal enducements to make these collections. It is, that when I grow old, and am unfit for the duties of an active life, I may have some little amusement in store to fill up those hours, when bodily infirmity may require some external consolation."

*But who can paint
Like Nature? Can Imagination boast,
Amid its gay creation, hues like hers?
Or can it mix them with that matchless skill,
And lose them in each other as appears
In every bud that blows?*

THOMPSON.

For the convenience of members, the following Calendar of Garden Work has been reprinted, through the courtesy of the editor, from the 1933 file of "HORTICULTURE."

Coal ashes contain an insignificant amount of potash and phosphorus, contrary to the popular belief. They do, however, possess a marked value for lightening heavy soils. They may be spread over the ground at this time.

Garden clubs planning early Spring exhibits will find in the fleece-vine, Polygonum auberti, an excellent subject for forcing. It makes a lot of excellent green foliage.

Spare time during the Winter months may be occupied in making garden trellises, archways, and furniture. These articles will help materially in making the garden a more livable spot.

Many perennials will flower the first year if they are started early from seed. Sow hollyhocks, delphiniums, and other perennials now in the conservatory. Obtain also a choice strain of tuberous rooted begonia seed which, if sown this Winter, will flower next Summer.

There are a number of excellent new varieties of ever-blooming begonias that are very useful for bedding purposes in the Summer and that also make fine house plants in Winter. Sow the seed as soon as possible in pans of light, fine soil. Merely dust the seed on the surface, press it in and cover the box or seed pan with a pane of glass and newspaper. Transplant the seedlings while they are still very small.

Astilbes or spiraeas should be started into active growth now if they are to be had in flower by Easter. They need an abundance of water at all times, and a cool place.

Dahlia tubers in storage should be looked over carefully and all diseased roots discarded.

See that the birds are fed, especially when snow is deep on the ground or the fields are covered with ice and sleet. Establish a feeding station if one is not already available.

Get hotbeds in order so that they will be in readiness for the first sowings of seed. Consider heating hotbeds with electric cables which have proven to be thoroughly satisfactory and economical in both commercial and private establishments.

Send for seed and nursery catalogues to be used in making plans for the next season's gardening activities.

Cut branches of pussy willow, forsythias and other flowering shrubs and trees may be forced into flower indoors.

Examine ornamental trees and shrubs for scale infestation. Dog-woods, ash trees, ornamental fruit trees, and so on, are common hosts of scales. These insects may be materially reduced in number by proper pruning now and spraying with oil emulsion or other approved dormant sprays.

FEBRUARY

*"Glowing bright
Beneath the various foliage
Wildly spreads
The arbutus, and rears his scarlet fruit
Luxuriant mantling o'er
The craggy steeps."*

Rock plants and perennials set out last Fall may have been heaved out of the ground with the frost. It will be wise at this time to push back into the soil any plants that have their roots exposed.

One may take advantage of mild days to do the necessary pruning of fruit trees. Apples and pears may be pruned now but it will be wiser to wait with peaches, plums and cherries until later.

Seeds of vegetables and flowers that are to be started in hotbeds early or in boxes indoors should be ordered now.

Insect pests on house plants may begin to show activity from now on. Keep a careful watch and spray the plants regularly with a nicotine or other proprietary insecticide or, in case of bad infestation, dip the plants entirely in a strong solution.

Persons who have neglected to pot bulbs for forcing indoors may purchase them from florists now, properly potted and ready to put in a light window.

The new annual Canterbury Bell if sown this month should flower in six months' time in the garden. It will be advisable also to sow seeds indoors or in the conservatory of the new double shasta daisy in order that early blooms in the garden may be assured.

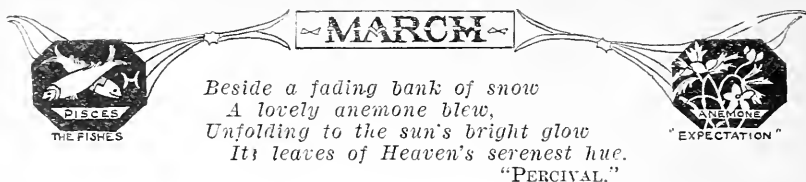

The canker disease of roses which frequently kills back long canes of even the climbing kinds gains a foot-hold wherever the bark is broken or bruised. Therefore, tie up any straggling canes of climbing roses at this time to keep them from being whipped in the wind.

Winter is the time to move large deciduous trees.

Jerusalem Cherries may be started from seeds now indoors and later transplanted to pots. Plant them in the garden during May.

Window boxes of evergreens which are in a sunny location may become dry unless they are given a thorough watering during mild weather.

Oxalis and tuberous rooted begonia bulbs may be potted now and throughout March. When potting oxalis bulbs in a flower pot or hanging basket, place a little sand under each bulb. Tuberous rooted begonias may be started in sand or very light compost. Be sure to get the tubers right side up and plant them so that the bud is just under the surface of the soil. Some persons prefer to delay planting until the tubers show new growth. If the air is dry, plunge the pots in a box of wet ashes or sand until they start to grow.

Annuals to sow in the house, frame or conservatory this month include China asters, dahlias, both dwarf and tall, dianthus Sweet Wivelsfield, ice-plant, monkey-flower, lupines, salpiglossis, salvia, snapdragons, stocks, verbenas and Vinca rosea.

Salvia patens and S. farinacea, started from seeds indoors now, will produce an abundance of blue flowers during most of the Summer.

Seeds may be sown in what is called gentle heat indoors in this way: fill a basin or pie plate with hot water night and morning. The box in which the seeds are sown should be placed over the basin.

Fruit trees and ornamentals may be sprayed to control scale and other insects if the weather is mild.

Finish fruit tree and shrub pruning.

Start bulbs and corms or tubers of fancy-leaved caladiums, tuberous-rooted begonias, gloxinias and achimenes, if this has not already been done. If these beautiful Summer plants are unknown to you, look them up in the seed catalogues.

Sweet peas may be sown outdoors late this month if the ground was prepared last Fall. To get an early start, plant seeds in small flower pots or plant bands either in a coldframe or a cool, sunny room. Water the soil in the pots thoroughly before planting the seeds.

Do not neglect to spray fruit trees and ornamental flowering trees and shrubs now with a good dormant spray to get rid of such pests as the oyster shell scale, San Jose scale, European red mite, aphids, pear psyllas and other pests.

Put the sashes on the coldframes to warm the soil in preparation for the sowing of seeds of flowers and vegetables late this month.

Brussels sprouts is a cool-season plant. To get the best results sow seeds in a coldframe now.

Dig all parsnips and oyster plants that have been in the ground all Winter and store them in a cold cellar.

In many gardens, a few early vegetables may be sown outdoors if the soil is so dry that it will not stick to the tools. At this time sow the seed thickly but very shallow.

Do not be hasty in uncovering perennials in the garden, and roses and most of the hardy bulbs.

Sow grass seed just as soon as the frost is out of the ground and the soil can be worked. The earlier it can be sown, the better.

APRIL

*"I gaze upon her violet beds,
Laburnum's golden tress'd,
Her flower-spiked almonds; breath perfume
From lilac and syringa bloom,
And cry, 'I love spring best!'"*

Garden roses should be planted during the first part of this month in the East wherever the soil is entirely free of frost. Hill soil around every plant for two weeks to keep the tops from shrivelling before the roots have become established.

Remove the top Winter covering from rose beds and spray with Bordeaux mixture if the buds have not yet started to grow.

Prune the tops of hybrid tea and hybrid perpetual roses back two-thirds. Always trim out weak wood and cut away all dead canes of roses every Spring.

Treat the gladiolus corms for thrips. Use one ounce of naphthalene flakes to every 100 corms. Sprinkle the flakes over the corms, keeping them in closed paper bags for three or four weeks. It will not be necessary to remove the husks from the corms.

Summer and Fall flowering perennials like phlox and chrysanthemums may be dug up now and divided for better blooms this coming season. Enrich the soil and replant the younger outside divisions of the clumps.

Winter-killed spots in the lawn should be raked now and when the soil is dry, sow grass seed, even though late frosts may still be expected.

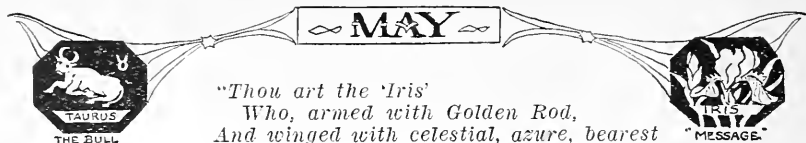

All lawns should be raked every Spring as soon as the surface is dry, with an iron rake. Do not burn over the lawn. While the soil is still damp and friable, roll the lawn once.

Peonies that have in the past been troubled with botrytis blight may be kept healthy by removing the soil from around the crown of each plant, trimming off all dead stalks and then filling in around the crowns with fresh soil covered with sand. Spray the young peony stalks as they grow with Bordeaux mixture.

It is now safe to transplant trees and shrubs. Evergreens can be moved with a ball of soil around the roots. Keep all newly transplanted material well watered as the season advances.

In all beds and borders, work in a top dressing or apply a good well-balanced fertilizer being careful, however, not to disturb bulbs that are late in starting.

Ammonium sulphate spread at the rate of two or three pounds to 100 square feet is a good fertilizer for evergreens. Complete commercial fertilizers analyzing 10-6-4, 8-5-3 or 4-12-4, when used at the rate of three or four pounds to 100 square feet, will also give good results. Cultivate the fertilizer into the soil and then water thoroughly. These fertilizers may also be used for shrubs.

"Thou art the 'Iris'
Who, armed with Golden Rod,
And winged with celestial, azure, bearest
The message of some god."

When preparing the perennial border with manure as a fertilizer, dig it in deeply. It should not come in contact with the roots. Avoid using manure around peonies, delphiniums and bearded irises.

Spring is the best time to transplant magnolias and the tulip tree, Liriodendron tulipifera, which have fleshy roots.

When transplanting evergreens, mix an ample amount of peat moss or leaf mold in the soil. Water heavily. Make a basin of soil around each plant to collect rain water. Mulch with peat moss later.

Large specimen trees ten feet or more tall and large shrubs that have just been transplanted, especially those that are exposed to strong winds, should either be staked or supported with guy wires until they are well rooted next Summer, to prevent their being loosened in the soil during storms.

Dormant roses that are set out now should be cut back severely, leaving only two or three buds at the base of each stem. If potted roses in full leaf are set out during hot dry weather, water them well and shade the plants if possible during the middle of the day.

Sow seeds of many perennials either in a frame or in beds in the open ground. Seeds of delphiniums, gaillardias, coreopsis, violas, hollyhocks, centaurea, pyrethrum, alyssum and sweet william may be sown in the open ground. The following will need protection from the hot sun of early June and should be sown in beds where lath shading can be applied: aethionema, campanula, heuchera, geum, lobelia, primula, erinus, thalictrum and hypericum.

The first planting of gladiolus bulbs can be made now. Even before the new shoots come through the ground, spray the surface of the row or bed with a mixture of one rounded tablespoonful of Paris green, two pounds of brown sugar and three gallons of water to control the gladiolus thrips. Spray again when the plants are a few inches above ground and a third time, if necessary, before the leaves have appeared.

Manure is a good fertilizer to use around narcissus plants, including those that are naturalized in grass.

Early flowering shrubs like the Cornelian cherry, Cornus mas, forsythias, and some of the early flowering spiraeas may be pruned as soon as they are through blooming. Cut out some of the oldest canes to the ground wherever this is necessary. Hard pruning keeps forsythias bushy. The cornus probably will need very little attention.

Set out now late Summer and Fall flowering plants such as the heleniums, hardy chrysanthemums, Michaelmas daisies, Japanese anemones, phlox, and the red hot poker plant, tritoma.

When setting out China aster plants, mix a little tobacco dust in the soil around each plant to ward off the root aphids which may be destructive otherwise.

Rock garden plants set in small pockets of soil should be pressed in very firmly.

JUNE

*"The cowslip startles in meadows green,
The buttercup catches the sun in its chalice,
And there's never a leaf nor a blade too mean
To be some happy creature's palace."*

White peony blooms near the rose garden, light colored faded rose blooms on the plants and even the golden leaved shrubs will attract rose bugs or rose chafers. Spray with arsenate of lead to get rid of the insects. Amateurs report that powdered arsenate of lead sprinkled under each rose bush or one tablespoonful of copperas to a plant will also control the rose bugs to some extent.

The blossoms of everbearing strawberry plants that were set out this Spring should be kept picked off until the first of August.

Keep the everblooming, perpetual and rambler rose bushes dusted with sulphur or sprayed with a proprietary solution to protect the leaves against mildew and black spot diseases. Gather and burn diseased leaves as soon as they fall.

Boxwood plants need an abundance of water during June and July. If possible, the foliage should be sprayed with water every day but this should never be done in hot sunshine.

Plant dahlia tubers four or five inches deep on their sides. Firm the soil well around the roots. Sprinkle commercial fertilizer alongside the rows after the planting has been completed and rake it in. Use a fertilizer that is low in nitrate contents.

Make a sowing of Iceland and Alpine poppies in a well drained part of the garden or rock garden to get good flowering plants for Fall.

White pine trees that are being grown as a windbreak, screen or in a garden planting should have their new growths tipped back part way now to make the plants bushier. Wear old gloves.

When cutting peony blooms, always leave two or more leaves on the stalks from which the blooms are cut. It is wise, also, not to cut all the flowers from any one plant.

Set out water lilies and aquatic plants in the garden pools now.

It is time to clip the hedges if this work has not already been done. There are mechanical and electrical clippers available now which speed the work remarkably.

If tulips have shown disease this year, make sure to gather and burn all the tops and dead flowers to prevent the spread of a common tulip trouble, "fire disease."

Darwin tulips should always be lifted and stored for the Summer in the Middle West.

Go through the iris plantings now, separating the fans of foliage to see if the borers have started to work in the leaves. Look for watery places between the leaves and squeeze them with the fingers, thus killing the young borers.

JULY

*'When the heat like a mist-reil floats,
And poppies flame in the rue,
And the silver note in the streamlet's throat
Has softened almost to a sigh,
It is July.'*

The Mexican bean beetle which is like a lady-bug but colored yellow with black spots, and the bright yellow larvæ of this insect are increasing in number every year. Watch for it on the bean leaves from now on and dust with Dutox available from seed stores for the first generation of the beetle. For late crops of beans dust again late in July and once more ten days later. Use a nozzle on the dust gun that will drive the mixture up under the foliage. Never use arsenate of lead on beans.

Snip the dead flower clusters from lilacs, azaleas and rhododendrons. This is practically all of the pruning required by these plants. By removing the old flower clusters, better blooms will be had next year.

The lace-wing fly, a small insect that feeds on the undersides of leaves, turns those of rhododendrons and laurels rusty. Spray now with a weak oil solution that can be obtained from seed stores or other materials recommended for the purpose.

Evergreens that have taken on a brown or rusty appearance and that have webs appearing at the bases of the needles are infested with red spider. Several kinds of spray can be obtained from the seed stores that will control this insect. Constant washing of the evergreens with the hose will rid them of most of the tiny spider-mites.

Quack grass, Canada thistles, burdock, and goldenrod can be eradicated by spraying them with a solution of sodium chlorate mixed at the rate of one pound to one gallon of water. Thoroughly wet the foliage, using the solution at the rate of one or two gallons to a square rod. This does not sterilize the soil, although crops cannot be grown for a month or more. Sodium chlorate is inflammable and explosive. There is a proprietary material available from seed stores that is a safe substitute.

Oriental poppies may be transplanted or increased from now on. To get a large number of plants, make root cuttings two inches long. In order to remember which end should be planted up, make the top cut straight across and the bottom cut slant-wise. Plant the cuttings an inch deep in the propagating bed or in the garden.

AUGUST

*The sunflower turns to her
God, when he sets,
The same look which she turned

"MORE."

Sow seeds now of myosotis (forget-me-not), bellis (English daisy), althea (hollyhock), papaver (oriental poppy), dianthus (sweet William), and viola (pansy). It is wise to plant the seeds in rows in a frame. Very small seeds may be sown in pots or flats.

Delphinium seeds are best sown as soon as they are ripe. Aquilegia or columbine plants should be renewed frequently. To get the best plants, sow the choicest seed available now.

The offsets on saxifrage plants may be taken off and planted in the garden or potted singly in small flower pots.

Narcissus bulbs and other kinds that have become crowded when naturalized in grass should be transplanted if they have in the last year or so failed to flower. Separate the clumps and enlarge the planting.

This month is the best in which to have iris rhizomes shipped from great distances. When digging and separating bearded irises in the garden, destroy any bright chestnut-brown pupae of insects for they probably are the iris borer.

Be on the watch for the nests of the Fall web worm on trees and shrubs. Cut and burn them as soon as they appear.

During the dry Summer months, water the garden in the late afternoon or evening. Water should never be sprayed on plants when the temperature drops suddenly, or when northeast winds are dominant; this results in plants being attacked by mildew.

Choice flowers for the conservatory during the next Winter may be started from seeds in August. Try the Linaria maroccana hybrids and Statice suworowi.

Many bulbs and plants may be set out this month as, for instance, the Madonna lily and the Virginia cowslip, Mertensia virginica.

Transplant or set out oriental poppies and the bleeding heart, Dicentra spectabilis, at this time. Plant, too, Doronicum caucasicum and lupines.

Unusual bulbs to go in now are the colehicums, Fall-flowering crocuses and the hardy amaryllis, Lycoris squamigera.

The lovely native blue phlox, Phlox divaricata, is now in a reasonably dormant condition and may either be divided and reset or introduced into the garden.

Disbud the exhibition dahlias to get prize winning blooms.

As the flowers fade on hardy phlox, snip off the old flower heads to prevent them from seeding and to encourage later bloom.

Most evergreens may be transplanted now if care is taken to water them very heavily and to continue watering throughout late Summer and Autumn.

SEPTEMBER

*"It is the Autumn breeze
That, lightly floating on,
Just skims the weedy leas,
Just stirs the glowing trees,
And is gone."*

September is the peony planting month. Only strong divisions with from three to five "toes" should be planted. In selecting peonies do not overlook the old-fashioned Paeonia officinalis rubra.

Plant bulbous irises this month. In northern sections, Dutch irises set out in a coldframe will give remarkable blooms next Spring.

It is now time to lift, divide and transplant the Siberian, Japanese and spuria irises. It is not too late to remake plantings of bearded varieties.

Plant all kinds of bulbs when they become available from the seed stores and bulb specialists, as, for instance, crocuses, snowdrops, scillas, chionodoxas, narcissi and Madonna lilies.

To avoid disappointment, poison or trap moles in their burrows to prevent ravages to bulbs later on.

Pansies and English daisies that have been started from seeds should now be transplanted to raised beds or coldframes where they are to remain for the Winter.

Lawn making and renovating are in order this month.

Rock garden plants with good root systems may be set out in the rock garden now. They will take hold readily and flower abundantly next year. With a new rock garden, however, it may be advisable in some sections of the country to allow the soil to settle over Winter, setting out the plants next Spring.

Perennials can be reset this month to good effect with the exception of Autumn flowering kinds and others that prefer to remain in place for a number of years, as for instance Japanese anemones and the gas plants. When dividing perennials use only the vigorous outside growths of each clump, discarding the centers. Of course new perennial borders planted now will be well established next Spring.

Both shrubs and trees may be transplanted by the end of the month. Make up the want list now.

Order lily bulbs, tulips, hyacinths and other bulbs to guarantee obtaining choice varieties that are usually limited in supply.

Destroy the spruce gall aphids which produce roundish, pineapple-like enlargements at the base of the new shoots of spruce trees by spraying with a nicotine and fish oil soap solution. The spray mixture is made up of one pound of nicotine and five pounds of fish oil soap in one hundred gallons of water or in that proportion. Laundry soap or soap chips are satisfactory in place of fish oil soap. Direct the spray on the underside and tips of all the branches.

OCTOBER

*"When gentians roll their fringes tight
To save them for the morning,
And chestnuts fall from satin burrs
Without a word of warning."*

The Chinese cinnamon vine has tubers which are semi-hardy. They should be lifted and stored over Winter like dahlias. They will grow larger every year with this treatment.

Wisterias are best planted in the Fall to the southward of Philadelphia and on the Pacific Coast.

Some of the garden chrysanthemums are not entirely hardy in the northern states. To keep the plants over Winter, lift them, after flowering, and plant them in coldframes where they can have the necessary protection.

To prevent field mice from girdling fruit trees during the Winter, wrap the tree trunks now with ordinary building paper (not tar paper) and tie the paper securely with heavy twine. Hill a little soil against the paper. Some persons prefer to use wire guards.

Keep the lawn mown as long as the grass keeps growing. If the grass is too long over Winter, it will be difficult to handle in the Spring.

Many vines and shrubs can be propagated by layering. Bend down shoots and peg them to the soil. Loosen the soil first where the shoot is to rest. Mound soil over the pegged-down section of the stem or cover it with a heavy stone. Allow a foot or more of the tip to remain uncovered.

Use only selected bulbs of tulips and hyacinths for forcing purposes. Plant them in pots or bulb pans available from florists and seedsmen. The pots must have a good drainage in the bottom, which may be a layer of charcoal, cinders or pieces of broken flower pots. Plant the bulbs so that they are covered with soil but do not plant them too hard. Store the pots in a coldframe, or cold cellar until time to force them in the Winter.

When the tops of peony plants are sufficiently dry, cut the old stalks back close to the ground line and burn them. Peony diseases remain over Winter on these stalks.

Many amateurs have found it advisable to plant their sweet peas in the Fall. Persons intending to do this should prepare the soil now preferably by digging a trench, even to the depth of two feet. Dig garden compost into the lower depth of soil and add a layer of well rotted manure further enriched with superphosphate at the rate of two ounces per yard of row. Bone meal and wood ashes are also useful. Refill the trench with top soil and mound it in the middle until planting time in November.

NOVEMBER

*On the moors it dwelleth free,
Like a fearless mountain child.
With a rosy cheek, a lightsome look,
And a spirit strong and wild.*

TWAMLEY.

It is time now to plant garden roses. The canes will not need to be pruned at all this Fall. Set the plants firmly in the soil and hill earth around them immediately after planting. Well rotted manure is excellent to work into the lower depths of the soil in the rose bed, but it should not come in contact with the roots.

Tall established hybrid perpetual roses may be shortened somewhat at this time and the canes then tied to stakes to keep the plants from loosening over Winter. Loose canes of climbing roses should be securely tied to their support. Make a thorough clean up of all dead foliage especially in the beds of hybrid tea roses.

Lime may be very satisfactorily worked into the soil where it is needed. Many garden perennials, including the bearded iris, enjoy a well limed soil and often rose bed soil needs correction.

Shrubby plants like lilacs, deutzias and flowering trees and shrubs of many kinds which are useful in setting up early Spring flower shows may be dug and set in pots or boxes for storing in a cold cellar until forcing time. Choose specimens that are well studded with flower buds.

Continue to set out Spring flowering bulbs. Try some of the smaller dainty bulbs such as snowdrops, scillas, grape hyacinth and crocuses in the rock garden or under shrubs.

It is not advisable to allow leaves to remain on the lawn over Winter. Leaves are very useful in the garden, however, for they make an excellent Winter mulch in the shrub border, under rhododendrons and azaleas or they may be combined with chemicals to make artificial manure.

Anyone wanting to propagate shrubs with attractive fruits, particularly the ones most enjoyed by birds, should gather some of the berries now. Spread the berries between layers of sand in a wooden box. Leave the box in the open to freeze over Winter. In the Spring separate the seeds from the pulp of the berry and sow them in a bed, mixing a little fine peat moss and sand into the surface of the soil.

If iris borers have been destructive during the past season, lightly burn over the iris clumps now to destroy the eggs of the iris borer that were laid on the foliage in September and October. The fire should not be hot enough to scald the rhizomes.

DECEMBER

"Warmth within, all snow outside,
Gay wreaths upon your door.
A finer, cheerier Christmas-tide
Than you have known before."

One may now sow sweet peas out of doors in well prepared trenches. Planting at this time, in many states, will ensure sturdy plants and early flowers next year.

After the first heavy freezing of the ground, mulch the strawberry bed with a light two-inch covering of any material that will not mat down. Straw or salt hay is good. Avoid using any material that may carry weed seeds. Pine needles make an excellent mulch.

Clean up the vegetable garden thoroughly, burning refuse of all kinds that may harbor diseases or insects.

Finish as soon as possible with the planting of Spring flowering bulbs of all kinds. Try some of the smaller, dainty bulbs such as snowdrops, scillas, grape hyacinths and crocuses in the rock garden or under shrubs.

Dwarf boxwood used as an edging in the garden should be protected for the Winter with cut branches of evergreens laid over them or a light covering of salt hay. Larger specimens, too, should be shielded from the bright Winter sun and from the weight of snow with some sort of a shelter of canvas, straw or boards. Most persons favor leaving room at the bottom of any shelter for the free circulation of air.

Set out Japanese lily bulbs as soon as they are available. Keep the soil heavily mulched where the bulbs are to go to prevent it from freezing. Plant the Gold Band Lily, Lilium auratum, from nine to twelve inches deep in average soil. The showy Japanese lily, L. speciosum, should go ten inches deep.

Have a Christmas tree for the birds outside your window, or hang dried fruit, cracked nuts, berries and suet on the boughs of a nearby evergreen. Special wild bird food mixtures are available. These little neighbors more than pay for their keep in cleaning weed seeds and harmful grubs from our gardens, even at this time of the year.

Poison Ivy is best eradicated at this time of the year. Use gauntlet gloves and dig out the plants. If impossible to burn them at once, pile them in an out-of-the-way place to dry for burning next Spring. Severe attacks of poison may be received from contact with smoke from the plants when burned.

Force lily-of-the-valley pips in pots of bulb fiber, peat moss or sand giving them a high temperature from the very start and keep the pot in a dark moist place until the tops are well formed.

THE REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

It has been necessary to curtail expenditures somewhat in 1934 on account of decreased income, but it has not been necessary to eliminate any of the privileges of the Society or to greatly curtail them. Each year the Finance Committee allots to each Committee Chairman the amount of money to be spent from the estimated income. In 1933, the income amounted to approximately $27,500. In 1934, this had shrunk to $23,000, the decrease being caused by smaller income from investments (mostly mortgages) in the Elizabeth Schaffer Trust Fund. By the skillful handling of expenditures by the various Committee Chairmen we were able to finish the year without a deficit.

We started the year, 1934, with 3,547 members, have lost 608 members and gained 424, making a net loss of 184 members and a present paid-up membership of 3,363. A new committee, composed of Mr. W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., and Mr. Jay V. Hare, has been appointed to devise ways and means of gaining new members.

May I once again call to the attention of all of our members the importance of this Society growing in membership. We should have at least 5,000 members. Horticulture is such a tremendous subject that the knowledge embraced in its work runs into many scientific channels. The care and culture of plant life furnishes employment for millions of people. It has been the aim of the Council of the Society, in increasing its membership, to include those whose life work has been directed in these various channels of horticultural knowledge, to the end that the Society may become the medium through which this knowledge can be made available to a very large membership.

The Society lost thirty-five Annual Members and twelve Life and Honorary Members by death this year. Among the Life Members were three members of the Executive Council, Mr. George L. Farnum, Mrs. Horatio Gates Lloyd and Mr. William Warner Harper, and Mr. Louis Burk, a former Council member.

Mr. Farnum was a member of the Executive Council for five years. He was an active exhibitor and Chairman of the Exhibition Committee. He was an authority on the Dahlia and had a wonderful collection in his garden, and was well known in the horticultural world, being a vice-president of the American Dahlia Society, a member-at-large of the Garden Club of America and an honorary member of the Four Counties Garden Club.

Mrs. Lloyd became a member of the Executive Council in 1920, being one of the first three women elected. In 1930 she became the first woman vice-president of the Society. Her garden at Haverford, famous for its Iris Bowl, quarry rock garden and other features, was often opened to the Society. Mrs. Lloyd had a keen knowledge of gardening literature and possessed a remarkable collection of old Herbals and other early gardening books. She served as chairman of the Library Committee for ten years. She was one of the editors of the Bulletin of The Garden Club of America, first vice-president of that organization, and a member of "The Gardeners."

Mr. Harper was a true plant lover, and everything that grew green on the earth interested him. This spirit of love for the trees, the plants, the shrubs, found its high expression in the development of Andorra Nurseries at Chestnut Hill, and he was also interested in nurseries in other states. He was a member of the Board of Managers of Morris Arboretum of the University of Pennsylvania and a trustee of the Painter Arboretum.

Mr. Burk specialized in Orchids and had a distinguished collection of these plants at his home in Latham Park. He was a valuable exhibitor at the Philadelphia Flower Show. He served on the Executive Council for some five years.

C. FREDERICK C. STOUT,
President.

ANNUAL MEETING

NOVEMBER 21, 1934

The Annual Meeting of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in the auditorium of the Insurance Company of North America Building, 1600 Arch Street, Philadelphia, on November 21, 1934, with the President, Mr. C. Frederick C. Stout, in the Chair.

The President, after welcoming the members, outlined the more important developments of the year and announced the election of members of the Executive Council to serve for the next three years. The Secretary presented his annual report, after which he conducted a series of interviews with the following horticultural experts: Mr. Herbert J. Fisher, Mr. J. V. Hare, Mr. Edwin Matthews, Dr. J. Horace McFarland, and Mr. David Rust. (Interviews are printed in this Year Book on pages 30-36.)

SECRETARY'S REPORT FOR 1934

The 1934 activities began with the lecture series in January and February, three lectures being on botanical subjects and one on horticulture.

In March, the Society took an active part in the Philadelphia Flower Show. Mrs. Joseph P. Sims served again as chairman of the committee in charge of the classes sponsored by the Society, and Mr. Charles Willing, for the second time, designed and staged an attractive garden for the Society's special exhibit. We were honored by having Sir Frederick and Lady Moore, of Ireland, as our guests at the Flower Show, and were pleased to have Sir Frederick, along with other horticultural authorities, address us at the Society's Flower Show luncheon, a subscription affair held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, on March 15th.

In April and May, the Society conducted four afternoons of Garden Visits. This year the series was entirely distinct from the Garden Days of the School of Horticulture, as the old arrangement between the two organizations was terminated by mutual consent. Members of the Society had the privilege of taking one or two friends with them.

The summer months were, as usual, the least active of the year, the Library being the only activity which was carried on with practically no let-up of interest. Many members who were away had books mailed to them, and users of the Library who were at home enjoyed the books and magazines as much in the summer as in any other season. The Library will be open on Saturday afternoons during the winter months instead of Tuesday evenings as last year. Since Mrs. Lloyd's death, Mrs. J. Norman Henry has become Chairman of the Library Committee.

Two Garden Visits and two Flower Shows were held in the Fall. The Dahlia Show was presented in conjunction with the Bryn Mawr Horse Show in September, and the Hardy Chrysanthemum Show was held in November in rooms adjoining our offices.

The Exhibition Committee, like the Library Committee, suffered the loss by death of their chairman, Mr. George L. Farnum, who was tremendously interested in the Flower Shows of the Society. Mr. J. V. Hare, who has been an active member of the committee for several years, has taken Mr. Farnum's place as chairman.

In October Certificates of Merit were awarded, upon the recommendation of the Committee on Garden Awards, to the owners of three unusually interesting suburban gardens, as follows: Mrs. Isaac LaBoiteaux, of Bryn Mawr; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cover, Jr., of Bryn Mawr, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Brockie, of Chestnut Hill.

Mr. Rust will hold office consultation hours on Mondays this winter, as he did last year. Members may consult him about their problems or make appointments with him to visit their gardens on other week-days.

We have been happy to co-operate with other horticultural organizations this year, as usual, and our rooms have been used for about seventy meetings by Executive Boards and Committees of various groups. Some of them are: The Pennsylvania Forestry Association, the Council for Preservation of Natural Beauty in Pennsylvania, the Philadelphia Flower Show, the School of Horticulture for Women, and the Pennsylvania Wild Flower Society. One of the organizations, The Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania, has recently rented quarters next door to us in this building, and we are delighted to have them as neighbors.

Our relations with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and The Horticultural Society of New York have been most cordial, and again we have exchanged gold medals with them for award at exhibitions. We have also been on most friendly terms with the editorial staff of the periodical "Horticulture," and it is a source of gratification that we continue to include this worth-while gardening magazine among the privileges of membership.

This report, on account of the necessity of briefness, has dealt only with the work of the past year. I wish at some time there might be opportunity to discuss with the members what the officers feel are the really important functions of a Society such as ours, and how these functions may best be carried out in the changing world in which we find ourselves. It is easy to have great ambitions for usefulness for ourselves, but more difficult to direct the work from day to day, so that it can be useful to the greatest number of people. I am sure I speak for the other officers in wishing that our membership and resources were much larger so that we might double or triple the size of our Library, increase the number of our Flower Shows, greatly increase the number of our lectures and demonstrations and by these and other facilities really improve the horticulture of our city yards, our small suburban gardens and the larger outlying estates.

In the last fifteen years it has been my privilege to visit gardens in nearly every section of America and I have constantly been told that Philadelphia has the most beautiful suburbs of any city in America. A drive through our Main Line district makes one believe that the saying is correct, but other drives through less favored sections equally near the city put one in a much more skeptical frame of mind and show that much work is needed to make the eastern part of Pennsylvania and nearby New Jersey better sections to live in.

This Society, in its long history, has done much to encourage more beautiful and more studied planting but much more remains to be done. We are trying to do it, but realize how small our efforts are compared with the great need. We hope our members will help us to be more adequate to do our duty in this respect.

JOHN C. WISTER,

Secretary.

EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

In addition to the gifts of books which are noted in the report of the Library Committee and the prizes for flower shows which are mentioned under Exhibition Awards, we wish to thank the following members who have generously given flowers and plants for the rooms of the Society during the year: Mr. J. V. Hare, Mrs. J. Norman Henry, Mr. Alex. MacLeod, Mr. Edwin Matthews, Mr. Frank B. Meyer, Mr. S. S. Pennock, Mrs. Alice Cope Rehfuß, Mr. William Ritter, Mrs. Arthur H. Scott, Mr. A. D. Van Dyke, Miss Anne B. Wertsner, Mrs. Edgar T. Wherry and Mr. John C. Wister.

We are grateful also to the artists, members of "The Ten" and Mrs. Alice Cope Rehfuß, who have lent us flower paintings, and to Mrs. J. Norman Henry who has given us many lovely pictures for the walls of the Library.

The Society wishes to express its appreciation to the Philadelphia newspapers for the publicity they have given to our exhibitions and other activities, and particularly to The Philadelphia Inquirer whose garden editor, Jane Leslie Kift, has been most helpful in reporting our affairs.

SOCIETY'S EXHIBIT, PHILADELPHIA FLOWER SHOW, 1934

REPORT OF EXHIBITION COMMITTEE FOR 1934

The Exhibition Committee is pleased to report that two Flower Shows were successfully staged by the Society during the year, and that the Society also co-operated in the Philadelphia Flower Show in March by taking charge of the garden club and amateur classes. A suitable location could not be found for a Spring Show and this fact, together with the reduced budget under which the Exhibition Committee was obliged to operate in 1934, made it advisable to omit the usual June exhibition.

The Philadelphia Flower Show was held, as usual, in the Commercial Museum, on March 12th to 17th, and it is estimated that 100,000 persons visited it. The Exhibition Committee was proud of the excellent exhibits staged by the garden clubs and by individual members of the Society.

The Dahlia Show was held on September 28th and 29th, in conjunction with the Bryn Mawr Horse Show. Although an outdoor show is delightful in many ways, the Exhibition Committee has found that there are also drawbacks and an effort is being made to find a suitable indoor location for the 1935 Show.

The Hardy Chrysanthemum Show was held on the sixth floor of the Insurance Company of North America Building, 1600 Arch Street, in rooms adjacent to the Society's quarters, on October 31st and November 1st. It was not a large exhibition but the flowers shown were of uniformly fine quality, and there was much material of interest to the person with an average-sized garden.

The Exhibition Committee suffered a great loss in the death of Mr. George L. Farnum, in August. Mr. Farnum had served as Chairman for four years, and his enthusiasm and ability were a continual inspiration both to his Committee and to those who exhibited.

A list of the awards made at the three exhibitions in 1934 and a list of awards made by the Society at flower shows of other organizations follow.

Respectfully submitted,

JAY V. HARE,
Chairman.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON GARDEN AWARDS FOR 1934

The following awards were made to gardens of members in 1934, upon the recommendation of the Committee on Garden Awards:

A Certificate of Merit to Mrs. Isaac LaBoiteaux, Bryn Mawr. Gardens may rightly be divided into two classes, the beautiful gardens in which design and architectural features are paramount, and the gardens of knowledge and interest in plant material. The garden of Mrs. LaBoiteaux belongs to the latter category. On a small piece of ground in a distinctly suburban location, Mrs. LaBoiteaux has developed a veritable arboretum of native wild flowers and very interesting plant material, bringing these to perfection by intelligent study of soil values. In the Spring, growing under pine and dogwood, are the arbutus, the cypripedium, the trillium, fritillarias, dog-tooth violets, and several varieties of primroses. These are only a few of her successes. The native Maidenhair and Royal ferns are beautifully grown. A visit with her in her garden is a real lesson in horticulture, as well as a delightful occasion.

A Certificate of Merit to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cover, Jr., Bryn Mawr. This garden is of the wild flower type. Mrs. Cover has studied and experimented until her woods and shaded slopes are a veritable wild flower preserve. The result is very lovely and restful, and a monument to the patience, intelligence and enthusiasm of the owner. This garden contains good possibilities for development.

A Certificate of Merit to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Brockie, Chestnut Hill. This place is elaborate in conception and holds great possibilities. It features mainly the natural resources. An old quarry with water has been developed into a delightful pool. Bold cliffs and wooded slopes—the latter filled with native plants, and in the Spring a sheet of narcissus in all varieties—lend a secluded character. The house and terrace and intimate garden, which are in themselves most attractive, look down on all this beauty.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM J. SERRILL,

Chairman.

REPORT OF THE LECTURE COMMITTEE FOR 1934

In 1934, four lectures were presented before the Society, all of them being given in the auditorium of the Insurance Company of North America Building, 1600 Arch Street, Philadelphia. Three comprised a series on botanical subjects, and were arranged and delivered by members of the Botany Department of the University of Pennsylvania, under the direction of Dr. Rodney H. True, head of the Department. The fourth was a horticultural lecture on wild flowers, illustrated with lantern slides and presented by Dr. E. M. Gress, State Botanist of Pennsylvania.

Arranged chronologically, the lectures were as follows:

January 16, 3 P. M. "How Plants Make and Use Their Food," by Dr. Rodney H. True, Professor of Botany, University of Pennsylvania, and Director of the Morris Arboretum.

January 30, 3 P. M. "How Plants Adjust Themselves to Their Surroundings," by Dr. Conway Zirkle, Associate Professor, Botany Department, University of Pennsylvania.

February 6, 3 P. M. "Wild Flowers of Pennsylvania," by Dr. E. M. Gress, State Botanist of Pennsylvania.

February 20, 3 P. M. "How Plants Are Related to Each Other," by Dr. John Milton Fogg, Jr., Assistant Professor, Botany Department, University of Pennsylvania.

Many requests for the text of these lectures have been received, but the Committee was unable to secure the material for publication. However, abstracts of some of the 1935 lecture series have been obtained through the kind co-operation of the speakers, and are published in the current Year Book.

Respectfully submitted,

ANNA ELLIOTT,
(Mrs. William T. Elliott),
Chairman.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE FOR 1934

The Library has added 200 books during the year, and it now numbers 3,950 volumes. Twelve hundred and eighty-one persons came to the Library in 1934, and in addition, 119 members secured books by mail. The Librarian had many calls to assist visitors in finding suitable material for their particular needs, and she reports that the facilities of the Library for reference and research are being used more each year.

The Committee suffered a great loss during 1934 in the death of Mrs. Horatio Gates Lloyd, whose untiring interest in the behalf of the Library was most evident in her ten years of service as Chairman. Mrs. Lloyd also gave the Library many old and valuable Herbals, which have added greatly to its value.

The Committee is very grateful for the donations of books which have been received during the year, and wishes to thank the following for their generous gifts:

Miss Ernestine A. Goodman	Mr. Romaine B. Ware
Mrs. G. B. Huff	Mr. John C. Wister
Dr. Jane Leslie Kift	"The Gardeners"
Mr. Owen Moon	The Massachusetts Horticultural
Mons. H. Pittier	Society
Mr. George W. Riehm

A list of Library accessions for 1934, and a list of periodicals received during the year, follow.

Respectfully submitted,

MARY G. HENRY,
(Mrs. J. Norman Henry),

GARDEN VISITS—1934

For several years, The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society co-operated with the Pennsylvania School of Horticulture for Women in Ambler, in joint Garden Days, but it was not possible to continue this co-operative arrangement and in 1934 the Society returned to its older method of conducting its own Garden Visits.

Twelve beautiful gardens were opened to the members during the series of Visits—the majority in the Spring, but two were reserved for Autumn Visits.

Members had the privilege of inviting one or two guests to accompany them—a new feature which seemed to be greatly appreciated. The first Garden Visits were in the vicinity of Wilmington, Delaware, the next ones in Chestnut Hill, and the succeeding Visits were to gardens on the Main Line with the exception of the last which was a Visit to the Arthur Hoyt Scott Horticultural Foundation at Swarthmore.

The Society is very grateful to the persons who generously opened their gardens in 1934.

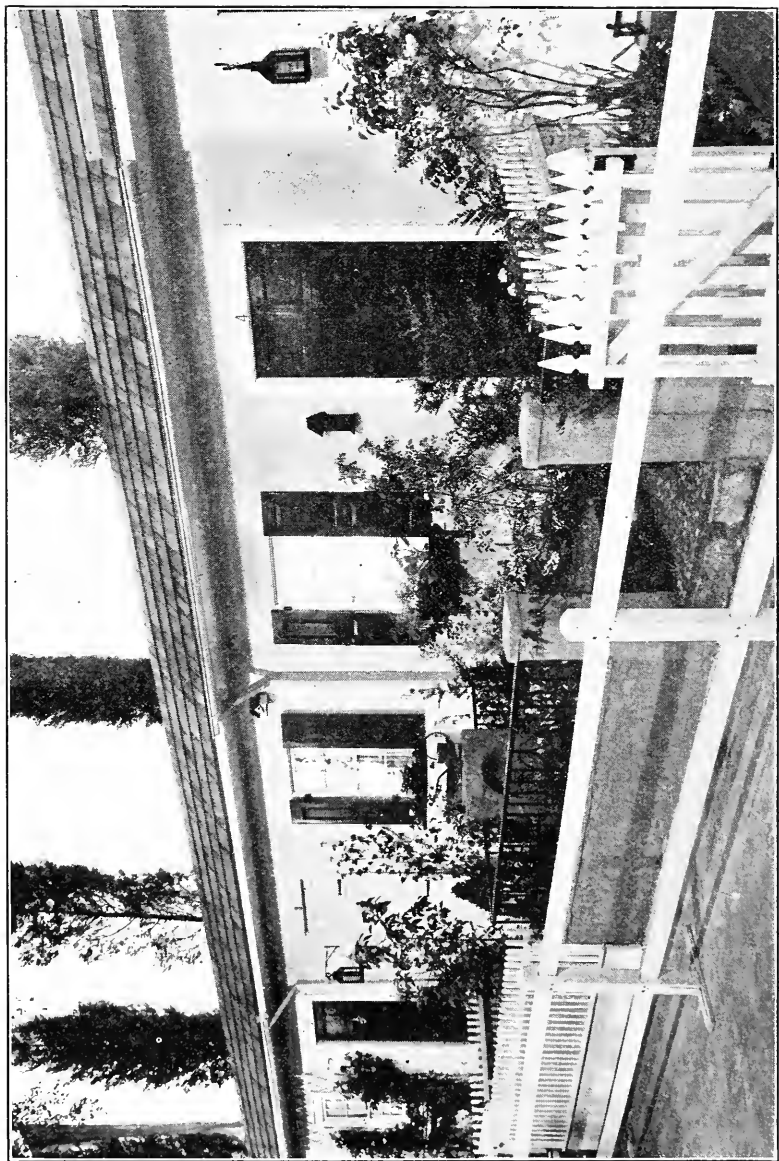

CONSULTANT IN HORTICULTURE

Mr. David Rust, the Society's horticultural expert, visited fifty-two gardens of members during 1934. The following is a list of subjects about which he was most often consulted, arranged according to the frequency of the inquiries in 1934, with comparative figures for 1933 to show the changing interest of members:

	1934	1933		1934	1933
Spraying	59	36	Moving Trees	18	24
Lawns	50	37	Shady Places	16	5
Perennials	48	42	Vegetables	15	16

Boxwood	41	16	Planting	14	11
Pruning	37	22	Old Places	11	15

Japanese Beetle ...	30	23	Hot Beds	6	8
Orchards	28	7	Pools	4	2
Bulb Gardens	18	12	Stone Walks	2	2

In addition to visiting gardens, Mr. Rust has given advice to many members in the office, and to many others over the telephone and by letter. He has also assisted in judging thirteen flower shows, and has addressed six garden clubs during the year.

We should like to remind members once more that Mr. Rust is at the service of all members. He will visit members' gardens to give advice (the only charge being for traveling expenses) and he is in the office on Mondays, except at times of the Society's flower shows, and on other days for consultation by appointment.

THE BOWMAN'S HILL STATE WILD FLOWER PRESERVE

Washington Crossing Park, Bucks County, Pa.

Sponsored by The Council for the Preservation of Natural Beauty in Pennsylvania

In January, 1934, the Washington Crossing Park Commission set aside about 100 acres within its area to be developed as the Bowman's Hill State Wild Flower Preserve. Beautiful Pidcock Creek winds its way through the Preserve while a picturesque old grist mill and race add their charm to the spot. Here is being developed a wild flower preserve which will include eventually all of the wild flowers of Pennsylvania, planted in locations which resemble as closely as possible their native habitat. The establishment of the Preserve in a State Park insures its perpetuation.

Bowman's Hill itself represents the outcropping of a sill of diabase, and its slopes are strewn with boulders of this "trap-rock." Although diabase is a rather basic igneous rock, the leaching action of the rain has removed bases from the soil to such an extent that fairly high acidity has developed, as indicated by the presence of several colonies of mountain laurel (Kalmia) and trailing-arbutus (Epigaea). Since it is much easier to develop neutral soil, for plants which need it, in regions of natural acidity than to carry out the reverse operation, conditions would seem to be favorable here for the establishment of a considerable proportion of the plants native to the State.

Since the inception of the project in November, 1933, definite progress has been made. A number of trails have been laid out and their entrances marked with attractive overhead portals. Conservation signs artistically burned into white oak stumps guard, without marring, the beauty of the Preserve. During the summer of 1934 a bank of the mill race was planted with at least a fourth of the species of ferns native to the state. The Picking Field is a novel feature of the Preserve. Here about twenty acres have been set aside where children and adults alike may indulge in the pleasure of picking field flowers without injury to the Preserve proper.

Bowman's Hill is a national shrine. It was used as a look-out by the Continental troops during the battle of Trenton. The tower was erected in memory of the men who made that famous crossing with General Washington. It should have a strong appeal not only to nature lovers and garden groups but to historic and patriotic organizations as well. It may become unique among the shrines of America if the interest of its friends can be translated into material help.

Groups wishing to visit the Preserve should get in touch with Mrs. Charles S. Musser, Chairman of the Hostess Committee, 25 Dudley Avenue, Lansdowne, and if desired, a guide who knows the wild flowers will accompany the group. Adequate and comfortable picnicking and parking facilities have been provided for guests.

The Preserve is being developed by a Committee appointed by Mrs. Clarence C. Zantzinger, Chairman of The Council for the Preservation of Natural Beauty in Pennsylvania. Dr. Edgar T. Wherry, of the University of Pennsylvania, is Chairman of the Committee, and Mr. W. Wilson Heinitsh, of Chestnut Hill, is Director of the Preserve.

SERIES OF INTERVIEWS WITH HORTICULTURAL EXPERTS

ANNUAL MEETING, November 21, 1934

Mr. Herbert J. Fisher, Bureau of Plant Industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Harrisburg, Pa.

Subject—INJURIOUS INSECTS AND DISEASES—Comparisons with other years.

Apple tree tent caterpillar was common last year and will be common again next year. Burning the nest and saturating nest with oils injure the tree. Control by hand picking the egg masses during the dormant period or by dusting or spraying with arsenate of lead a small area around each nest when it first appears as the tree leafs out in the Spring.

Sphaeropsis ellissi, a disease which kills back the twigs and branches of Austrian pines, is of increasing importance. Cutting out diseased wood from infected trees and stimulating the growth of the trees by feeding are the only suggestions offered for control at this time.

Red spider was responsible for serious damage last year and can be expected any year. Plants should be closely watched and red spider suspected as soon as they appear to be off color. Infested plants lack chlorophyll and present a lifeless and dusty appearance. As soon as detected, spray with CPO; 2% solution of liquid lime sulphur, or some of the common soaps and nicotine extracts.

Juniper scale is very common on various junipers, but is easily controlled by spraying with CPO at any time.

Lace fly of rhododendron, azaleas, crataegus and cotoneaster can be expected next year. By spraying carefully with CPO and nicotine as soon as the nymphs appear the infestation can be eliminated.

The Dutch Elm disease is threatening one of the most stately of all our trees—the elm. Nearly five thousand diseased trees have been found in the east, but none has been found in Pennsylvania. Members of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society can aid in this fight by helping to locate diseased trees. Send in twigs the size of a lead pencil from diseased branches to the Bureau of Plant Industry, Harrisburg. Members can help by keeping all their elms in vigorous growing condition and by burning all dead branches and all dead or dying elm trees. These measures will aid in checking the spread of the bark beetles which are known to spread the disease.

Mr. Jay V. Hare, member of the Executive Council of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, and Secretary of the Trevoise Horticultural Society.

Subject—THE DEVELOPMENT OF HORTICULTURAL SOCIETIES.

Gardening interest and a desire for more extended horticultural knowledge among the residents of the suburban and rural sections of America have resulted in a remarkable increase in garden clubs and horticultural societies, with membership therein constantly enlarging. In a country so extensive as our own it is neither possible nor desirable for one horticultural group to attempt to serve all sections in a manner similar to that of the great Royal Horticultural Society of England where a dense population resides in a limited area. Differences in climate, elevation and environment likewise make it impracticable for the entire country to indulge in identical forms of gardening or to use similar plant material.

Having chosen the location for a particular garden club, or horticultural society, and the type of gardening to be stressed, it is advisable to determine the policy which will be most effective in the extension of the knowledge to be disseminated. Some general principles can be safely followed by every organization of this character in its program of development. There must, of course, be some self-sacrificing individuals willing to devote uncompensated energies to the impartial direction of the affairs of the organization and to carry its burdens and responsibilities in order that the general membership may be encouraged to accomplish horticultural achievements. It is well to ascertain the capabilities of each member and to make definite assignments whether as a committee member or as a leader in some particular phase of the horticultural work to be undertaken.

Officers will find their tasks much less burdensome and their efforts much more effective when they shall have become personally acquainted with the majority of their members. Cordial relations between the officers and members are a most valuable asset and should be cultivated as assiduously as the plants in the garden. It should never be overlooked that all members, whatever their social standing, while gathered in such an organization have but a single purpose, namely, the extension of horticulture.

It is desirable that officers and committees keep the membership fully informed of the newer and better varieties of plant material available, and encourage them in the use and production of the best through exhibits at meetings, informal shows, or regularly scheduled shows. Many amateurs too timid to exhibit in a formal show will frequently make initial exhibits at club meetings or informal affairs. Frequent bulletins containing timely and useful topics can become very potent factors in the extension of the work of the organization. The conservation of natural resources and beauty, and the beautification of the roadsides and home surroundings, should be essential subjects for discussion at every meeting.

It is the nature of most individual gardeners to be interested in the experiments and experiences of other gardeners with plant material, especially with the new and rare things; and a plant exchange at a spring meeting will always prove exceedingly popular. The old adage that it is more blessed to give than to receive can be emphasized in such exchanges.

A kindly suggestion now and then and a word of encouragement to an amateur grower or exhibitor will usually result in an enthusiastic member. Not all individuals are constituted to assimilate scientific instructions, but nearly all do appreciate the inherent beauty of plant or flower. Lectures, or other methods for extending horticultural knowledge to large groups, should never be too prosaic or so highly technical that unfamiliar terms are required to express the thoughts to be conveyed, but should be in a language that is understood by all and also properly sweetened with sufficient visual beauty to make them palatable to the audience.

Open meetings, where each individual may feel free to ask and to receive information concerning even the simplest horticultural matters, should be held at frequent intervals. Monthly meetings on fixed dates appear to meet the needs of most organizations. Where members are unable to speak easily without notes, they should be encouraged to read prepared papers on assigned topics. Many valuable ideas are lost because of the timidity or inability of eager members to present them orally. Discussions at meetings should be confined entirely to horticultural or kindred topics and not permitted to stray into other fields of endeavor or controversy. Neither should purely business matters relating to the organization be discussed to the length that horticultural matters are overshadowed.

Sufficient instruction and encouragement by capable leaders or special instructors should be given to amateur exhibitors to instill into them the general principles of harmony, symmetry and those many indefinable qualities which give spirit and charm to decorative flower arrangements.

In preparing schedules for shows, thought should be given to classes for those who are novices in the art of flower arrangement in order that they may not be confronted with the fear of competing with others who have passed the amateur stage. It is generally politic to select strangers for judges, and for those in charge of exhibitions to refrain from entering competitive classes unless their entries are marked non-competitive.

A cordial greeting to all by officers or leaders at meetings will frequently determine many a modest member to continue membership and to put forth greater energies in the development of his own garden and in the extension of the activities of his organization.

Mr. Edwin Matthews, Vice-President Outdoor Arts Company, Inc.; Secretary of the Germantown Horticultural Society.

Subject—SHRUBS ON HOME GROUNDS—Winter injury of 1933-34.

The winter of 1933-34 was a stern testing time for many things—after viewing the casualties one is hesitant to state what is hardy and what is not. Among the great list of injured ornamentals, the broad-leaf types of evergreens, such as Box, Mahonia, Photinia, English and Japanese Holly, Evergreen Privet, Hybrid Rhododendrons and Azaleas, Viburnum rhytidophyllum and the newer kinds of Evergreen Barberries were the worst hit.

I am asked to prescribe a winter protection for such until they regain their full vigor. A heavy mulch of manure and leaf is always a splendid protection for the plant. While the various forms of shading and wind-breaks, such as burlap, fencing, straw matting, etc., are all aids to the plants, evergreen boughs arranged securely around the plants are the least offensive looking and are really very efficient. Protection by a wise choice of position is more important, however, than any form of artificial protection. Boxwood in sheltered, semi-shaded positions was not hurt nearly as much as that in open sunny positions. Even magnolia grandiflora came through splendidly where it occupied a sheltered position and was shaded from the morning sun. Because of one disastrous winter in ninety years, I hope we won't cease to plant these beautiful broad-leaf evergreens considered the aristocrats of the garden.

I am asked to suggest twelve kinds of berry-bearing plants for this section of the country. I would not only plant those that the birds love to partake of, but also some that the birds usually pass over, so that I might enjoy the colorful fruits in the landscape when flowers and foliage have fled the winter.

The twelve would comprise the following: Lonicera maaeki podocarpa, Berberis chinensis or vernae, Callicarpa purpurea, Ilex verticillata, Euonymus alatus, Euonymus bungeanus, Cotoneaster multiflora or divaricata, Photinia villosa, Pyracantha lalandi, Symphoricarpos racemosus, Crataegus cordata, Viburnum opulus.

I am asked also to suggest a hedge plant to supplant California privet. The very fact that a certain plant is so extensively used as California privet may prove that it is the best thing to use. I would, however, suggest that there are far better things than California privet, which because of its low first cost is chosen before anything else. There should certainly be more evergreen hedges, which are beautiful the whole year round. True, the first cost is considerably higher than privet, but I venture to say that if the labor costs concerned with clipping alone were kept over a period of five to ten years, the most expensive hedge would be the privet.

Why not a hemlock hedge? This is America's premier evergreen for beauty of foliage—is hardy in the most rigorous winters—and is quite amenable to shearing. American arborvitae too is a splendid subject for a hedge and adapts itself to being clipped and kept within bounds, or to grow at will as the case may be. For a medium size hedge the Siberian arborvitae will be just right; while for a low, informal hedge, Thuya Hoveyi and T. pumila are splendid material. For a hedge where abundant room can be given it, the Norway spruce or the white spruce can be well chosen.

For the acme of beauty and to be out of the usual run of hedges, we would recommend the upright form of the Japanese Yew; also our native Holly. Both have come through most severe winters with negligible injury and in the use of these beautiful subjects we would strike a real individual note and would not be aping our neighbors.

Even in deciduous material we have plants that are better than the common "hedge privet." The "Regel privet" or the "Amur privet" are better because they are, first, hardier; second, less formal; third, need less care in the upkeep—all points worthy of consideration in the choice of plants. More flowering hedges would be a gay relief from so much privet, and the following all form fine material for a variety of hedge situations—Spiraea van houttei, Lonicera fragrantissima, Berberis sinensis, Cydonia japonica, Euonymus alatus, Rhodotypos kerrioides and Hibiscus syriacus.

For a real protective screen hedge, our native American thorns, —Crataegus cordata, Crataegus crus-galli and Crataegus coccinea are sternly hardy materials that embody ornamental and lasting qualities.

Subject—NEW ROSES.

A great many new roses have been on trial at Breeze Hill during the summer of 1934. Among them may be mentioned as favorably noted the not altogether new Buttercup, a clear yellow; the lighter yellow with a beautiful bud being introduced as Feu Pernet-Ducher, the still lighter yellow, very free-blooming Souvenir de Jean Soupert.

Then among other than yellow I should mention Coral, which is described by its name, and the much deeper form in the new Ireland Hampton. A rose so rich in the hues that come from the Austrian Copper that its buds look almost brown, is Alezane. A number of other roses under number which came to us from Jackson & Perkins Company need hardly be mentioned, because a number doesn't get anywhere.

Nellie E. Hillock is a pink Golden Dawn of which I have a most favorable opinion because it bloomed close to the ground and the whole season through on a desirable plant. Deeper pink and an extremely beautiful rose is the new Warrawee. Radiant Beauty, a sport of Francis Scott Key, has fewer petals than that somewhat bothersome and beautiful variety, and thus is able to open agreeably under nearly all conditions. Its color is much brighter and richer, and it seems to me to be a very desirable rose. Carrie Jacobs Bond is one of several red roses from Dreer which I have very greatly liked.

There are other new roses which stick up just a little above the average, though I confess to a feeling that we would be well off if we had a ten-year moratorium on new roses so that we might turn backward and find fine and beautiful things among the roses which have been hastily passed over.

As to climbers let me say that the strongly advertised Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James did not bloom this year, having been bothered by the February frost. Easlea's Golden Rambler has not reached size enough to bloom anywhere that I have heard. We have a seedling grown by that veteran seeker for hardy roses, M. H. Horvath, which produces an abundance of tremendous clear yellow flowers for a longer time than most once-bloomers do. I do not know what it will be named, but it is worth mention as indicating that with that we are getting toward hardy, worth-while yellow roses that climb a little.

Reveil Dijonnais is an astonishing rose, not very tall as a climber, which produces flowers with a mingling of red and yellow that are truly unique. They are single, but anyone who ever has one flower of this sort will be delighted.

Mercedes Gallart has produced enormous deep pink flowers in abundance. It is one of the new climbers worth keeping on with.

At Breeze Hill we lost fifty-two percent of our hardy climbers either by the February frost elimination or by freezing to the ground, and therefore cannot report with any conclusiveness for another season, because we do not expect another such winter for at least another sixty years! Our really substantial yellow roses were Le Reve and Primrose, which came through virtually unharmed.

I have spoken previously about M. H. Horvath. He has been striving to get a series of climbing roses that would be hardy at 20 deg. below zero. At least twenty varieties of his production are seen at Breeze Hill, and most of them were not injured at all by the severe winter. Among them are some notable blooms which will come to naming and maturity as time goes on.

We do tend at Breeze Hill to eliminate varieties that are not really distinct. The small-flowered climbers are not considered so important any longer. I wish we had not lost so many of the lovely Australian climbers brought to Breeze Hill in 1927, and which offer a new beauty and size in rose bloom. They will all come back, and I expect again to see Scorchers, Black Boy, Countess of Stradbroke, Nora Cunningham, Kitty Kininmonth and Miss Marion Manifold in full beauty. In some places these roses tended to recur, which is one of the advantages worth mentioning.

It would be wrong to let anyone think we were discouraged at Breeze Hill because one hard winter has set roses back a little. We are going on more vigorously than ever, and see no reason whatever to change the thought that care in selection and in nurture will continually give us better and better roses.

Subject—REPORT OF CONSULTATIONS WITH MEMBERS OF THE SOCIETY—TYPES OF GARDENS VISITED IN 1934.

The territory that I have covered this past year embraces Reading in the northwest; Doylestown, northeast; Lancaster in the west; Wilmington, Delaware, in the south; and Merchantville, Haddonfield and Vineland in New Jersey.

The majority of visits were to gardens of one to three acres, gardens that formerly had an experienced gardener. Now, the lawn has been reduced, flowering shrubs have not been pruned, and evergreens are suffering from not being transplanted. Spraying, also, has been neglected.

Most of my local visits have been from Overbrook to Paoli, and in Germantown and Chestnut Hill. I have not had so many calls in the North Penn section, Jenkintown to Lansdale, nor in Delaware County, Lansdowne to Media.

The majority of our members today are interested in perennials. Roses and annuals, flowering shrubs, evergreens and trees do not receive the proper attention.

Many gardens do not have proper fertilizers on hand, nor a proper stock of insecticides and sprayers to apply them. As an example, last spring I found six apple trees infested with tent caterpillar. There was a one-quart hand sprayer in the house and a small bottle of Red Arrow on hand. All the tent caterpillar nests were destroyed before I left the place.

Many members today do not realize the importance of soil preparation. They will not dig deep or work in proper fertilizer. I have found some planting roses with a trowel and also planting iris with a trowel when a spade should have been used and the soil worked up at least twelve inches deep. When plants will not grow properly they say, "I must have my soil analyzed," when all that is needed is cultivation and fertilizer.

Every member who has a garden and is not able to employ an experienced gardener should call upon me to visit his garden at least twice a year. Don't wait until a tree or a plant is beyond hope. Let us conquer the disease and the insects. It is difficult for me to say which of the four seasons of the year is the most important. There are important problems in all. In Winter there should be more calls to give advice on pruning and collecting egg masses and cocoons of caterpillars. In Spring, the perennial borders and treatment of bulbs after flowering should have more attention. In Summer, azaleas, rhododendrons and fall grass should receive more attention. In Autumn, lawns and transplanting are important. In the Fall, I find much damage to azaleas, rhododendrons and evergreens from red spider, lace fly and thrip on account of not being sprayed in July and August. If a member is going to be away during the hot months and has azaleas and rhododendrons, etc., why not arrange for me to visit the garden and see that proper spraying is done?

Our members do not realize the importance of the service we are offering to them in this department of "Consultant in Horticulture." Every member has the privilege of calling upon me for advice, and may I suggest that if you have troubles, do not write or telephone. One must see the patient to properly diagnose the case. Send for me to visit your garden.

Let us grow more plants and flowers and better plants and flowers.

WINTER READING

By MARY G. HENRY
(Mrs. J. Norman Henry)

Chairman of Library Committee of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society

For those of us who like to work in our gardens, winter and the "freeze up" always seem to catch us before we are quite ready to cease our autumn efforts, and before we have quite finished making our plants comfortable for the months of low, fluctuating temperatures ahead.

We miss the pleasant routine work that goes with the care of a garden, and therefore it is then we should begin to dig deeply into the many garden books, old and new, that have been written for our study and enjoyment, during the long months when the garden is not dead, but sleeping.

"The English Flower Garden," by William Robinson, that splendid classic, contains a vast store of general information about the garden, the grounds, and planting material. This is a most inspiring and convincing book for beginners, or, indeed, for anyone who has not already read it. It well merits prolonged and careful study.

Where a gardener, owing to a limited time at his disposal, wants a helpful book, one that is especially suited to our climate and at the same time a most entertaining one, he would do well to choose "The American Flower Garden" by Neltje Blanchan.

"Aristocrats of the Garden" by E. H. Wilson is one of the books that should be read by everyone, amateur or otherwise, who is interested in new, rare, or beautiful trees or shrubs.

Anyone who reads Reginald Farrer's "My Rock-Garden" will surely ask for his other books. They are all most absorbing, especially for those who are interested in rock gardening. I have enjoyed and profited by them for twenty-five years.

"Gardens for Small Country Houses" by Gertrude Jekyll and Laurence Weaver is a book one enjoys the minute the pages are parted, for it is abundantly illustrated with pictures of some of the most beautiful gardens of England.

"The Book of Shrubs" by A. C. Hottes contains much valuable and not always easy to find information.

"Spring in the Little Garden," the well told story by Frances McIlvain, of the author's own garden, comes near home and is very pleasurable reading.

Then, too, there are many extremely helpful books for those who seek farther afield and wish to specialize in a particular group of plants.

"Rhododendrons for Everyone" by Kingdon Ward opens up a new world in the way of the ultra-popular class of shrubs, for it describes briefly and in clear language dozens of new and little known types of rhododendrons. There are, today, some hundreds of species that have been brought into cultivation during recent years by such well known men as Fortune, Wilson, Forrest, Farrer,

Rock, etc. It is a real revelation to read about tiny prostrate rhododendrons that do not rise more than an inch or two from the ground, with leaves sometimes no larger than a fingernail, and to learn about tree rhododendrons that grow to a height of eighty feet and carry leaves 12 inches wide and 30 inches long!

Then one needs to read a book to learn of the beauty and great variety of the many handsome types of narcissi that are now in cultivation. "Handbook of Narcissus" by E. A. Bowles is recommended.

"Daylilies" by A. B. Stout is an outstanding work, in that the author describes and tells about his beautiful new creations, hybrid Hemerocallis, that have made such a sensation in the plant world.

"Lilacs" by John C. Wister introduces the reader to many of the newest and best of the modern lilacs, and no home grounds, be they ever so small, are complete without at least a few of these splendid, new fashioned, "old fashioned" shrubs.

And now about orchids, last but not by any means least. Many amateurs in Great Britain grow these superlatively beautiful flowers, where there are often few facilities. Sometimes they are kept in with a small collection of mixed plants, or glassed-in porches, or even in heated frames, but the knowledge and skill of the grower makes them happy even in simple surroundings. Many persons in this country, too, with a small amount of glassed-in space can easily accommodate a few orchids among their other plants. The reading of "Orchids," a small book by James O'Brien, might well be a stepping stone.

Among the magazines of special interest in addition to Horticulture, are, "The National Horticultural Magazine," a quarterly published by the American Horticultural Society, "House and Garden," containing many helpful, seasonable articles on flowers and plants, and the "Gardener's Chronicle," an up-to-date English Weekly.

The "Garden Digest" is what the name denotes, condensed articles reprinted from selected magazines. "South African Gardening and Country Life," a new addition to our Library, is an excellent publication which depicts many of the very beautiful and quite different South African flowers and plants.

Frequently some of the information in magazines is obtainable nowhere else, so in order to keep well posted all true gardeners should run through some of them and peruse those of particular interest.

ABSTRACTS OF LECTURES DELIVERED BEFORE THE PENNSYLVANIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY, 1935

"TWENTY-FIVE YEARS WITH ROSES AND OTHER POSIES"

(Lecture—January 15)

By DR. J. HORACE MCFARLAND

Former President of the American Rose Society

I feel that in a sense I am here under false pretenses, because the quarter-century of garden enjoyment I want to present to you relates almost entirely to my own home garden, at Breeze Hill, Harrisburg, Penna., to which every member of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society is invited any day in the year.

It was in 1909 that the old place which we named "Breeze Hill," because it required only a change of one letter to make it fit the cold conditions we expected, became our place of residence. The tract had been described to me as "two acres of San Jose scale with a house attached." The house, built I think mostly in the Centennial year, was made comfortably habitable, and the San Jose scale suffered seriously under the continuing assault which has made it only a disagreeable memory.

Where the first section of the flower garden began, in the location we now call the Center Garden, there were the ruins of an old fallen greenhouse and a not altogether fallen ice-house. Breeze Hill mansion house was the headquarters of a large grape farm, the owner of which, Mr. Jacob Haehnlen, a Philadelphia lithographer, was an important wine-maker of his time. (He left to me a deep wine cellar under the living-room of the house, and the outside vault connected with the ice-house above referred to—all only of storage use to a man of prohibition lineage!)

On the place there were magnificent old trees, including one great monarch of a sycamore and a group of horse-chestnuts, several of which had to be sacrificed to get any sunlight at all into the house. The place was divided by arborvitae hedges, through two of which was one approach from the house which we have come to call "Lovers' Lane."

My first attempts, after beginning with annuals that 1909 summer, were toward having a good fruit garden and a good vegetable garden. Perhaps I succeeded, but as the lure of the rose and other posies possessed me, fruits and vegetables have retreated so that now there are only a few fruit trees, including one rather interesting and picturesque espalier of trained apple and pear trees, and just a little space for some pet tomatoes grown as standards. I did keep reminiscences of the old vineyard, and there were ten grapevines that had been planted in 1858 and that to this day bear grapes just as good as those on the newer vines which joined them. All the bunches are bagged each year, but the robins are able to beat me to their enjoyment of more than 75%.

I was very fortunate in having as a friend a celebrated landscape architect, who visited me before any garden work was undertaken, and at once selected the vertical axis of the place. This when marked by a sundial also provided the horizontal axis, and thus gave form to the garden, just as the remainders of the old arborvitae hedges gave unusual variation into garden rooms, as one might call them, or separate gardens. So we have not only the Center Garden, but an Orchard Garden, an East Garden, a Front Garden, and more than one Rose Garden.

As there is much shade, it was necessary to develop cover plants, and Pachysandra has served superbly in this use. We keep going a Pachysandra "factory" under one of the old arborvitae, so that we always have plants at hand to make changes. Another and even more pleasing cover plant is Anchusa myosotidiflora, which provides, very early in the spring, its great show of forget-me-not flowers and then settles down to round and beautiful foliage which will endure even in deep shade.

Of course I had to get bulbs planted, and tulips have been quite important. About a year ago a Holland bulb friend showed us that we had almost no tulips that were dependable, because they were all "breaking," and the broken tulips proved to be worthless. They were burned, and the new tulips following them will flower first for us in the spring of 1935.

Always I had a desire for a lily pool. Preparing for this convinced me of one physical fact, which was that water would not run up hill! Developing the necessary flat place in the Center Garden for the lily pool gave a chance for a wall which I had long wanted, and which itself is a thing of joy as planted with suitable items. There came also an opportunity to provide steps, and these have been interplanted on the treads with low-growing items, like Jersey Gem viola, so that they are attractively beautiful.

Two peony gardens followed in due course. Of course there were phlox and campanula, and our columbines have gradually been selected into a strain of real beauty. Into this we are just now working Aquilegia longissima, with spurs more than three inches long.

From a little start with lily-of-the-valley, these have been given opportunities as cover plants so that there is a great abundance of them. One of the loveliest natives in Eupatorium coelestinum has given us ageratum-like blue in a permanent fashion wherever we want it if we are careful enough with the white-string roots that are so easily lost when the ground is stirred in the spring.

Right now we find ourselves rather proud of our service yard, in which are bins for various fertilizers, for an abundance of manure, and a vast receptacle for every bit of vegetable material that can be rotted down into the leaf soil which is so important for this kind of a garden.

Of course I wanted a rock garden, which was begun with seven or eight stones that didn't fit. Later on, a beautiful rolling slope became the site for the present rock garden, which is not only pleasing but amusing, because so many friends congratulate me on my good fortune in having a place with such a fine outcrop of weathered limestone. They don't believe me when I tell them that there wasn't a rock on the place as big as my thumb. All were selected and introduced.

This rock garden and several of its children include a large variety of suitable plants displayed on the slopes, in the nooks and corners that have occurred. A particular attempt has been made to get permanent plantings of the tulip species, including T. praecox, T. clusiana, T. greigi, and others. Of course smaller narcissi come into the picture as well, and also the more unusual crocuses.

At one point in the edge of the Center Garden, under a maple tree, there occurs what we call the "Maple Spring," because it isn't a spring. With a little careful work in providing a concrete sub-base, a bog has been arranged here in which the rather unusual Primula japonica flourishes.

But to go on naming the plants in the rock garden would make this a mere catalogue.

We have adventured in lilies with a little success and many failures. Regal stays with us most of the time, and until the last February freeze we had many other lily attempts. Irises there are in abundance, and to my mind not always in very great beauty, because I am not an iris crank.

The place is very strong in hardy shrubs of the better character. There are notable mockoranges and lilacs, and in the former particularly attempts have been made to gather varieties of peculiar fragrance. There is on the front lawn an extremely fine plant of Sorbaria arborea which I commend to anyone. A good plant of Davidia sent me by E. H. Wilson looks as if it might bloom in another year, and we have a number of excellent plants of the beautiful Gordonia, or Franklinia. One remarkable specimen is that of Lonicera korolkowi floribunda, otherwise called the Blue-leaf Honeysuckle.

But of course I am expected to talk about roses. There are nearly eight hundred varieties on the place, and a remarkable assortment of the hardy climbers, or at least those that were hardy before last February, and may be hardy as they renew their canes. Several of these hardy climbers are original plants as received from Dr. Walter Van Fleet before they were named. Thus Mary Wallace and Breeze Hill both came into commerce and into prominence because they were shown here originally.

The pictures that I show indicate the general form of the rose garden, in which four quarters roughly associated in varieties to produce flowers of red, of yellow, of pink, and those between are bordered by arched climbers. All of this garden, terribly hurt by the last February freeze, is now being completely replanted in an experimental way which we hope will be most constructive.

All are invited to visit Breeze Hill, which is at least an instructive garden, because it has so many plants and so many rooms or gardens that may serve as pleasing suggestions to those who can do much better.

"HOW PLANTS UTILIZE THE SOIL"

(Lecture—January 29)

By DR. EDGAR T. WHERRY

Associate Professor of Botany, University of Pennsylvania

The material termed soil is one of the most complex and heterogeneous of nature's products. An indication of this is obtainable from a simple experiment, which may be performed at the outset. Two hundred cubic centimeters of water is placed in a cylinder, and into it is slowly poured two hundred cubic centimeters of a soil obtained from a bin where it was being stored for use in potting plants in a greenhouse. The mixture is then shaken and allowed to stand, and soon exhibits a tendency to form layers, which will now receive attention.

During a long period the ancient philosophers regarded the universe as made up of four elements, which in the order of increasing mobility and intangibility were earth, water, air, and fire; all may be regarded as represented in soil. Examination of the lowest layer obtained in the experiment shows it to be the earth element, consisting of fragments of the rocks from which the soil was derived. These range in size from the coarse fragments we term gravel through sand and silt to clay. Some of the last is so fine-grained that it does not settle, but remains suspended in the excess water toward the upper part of the column. The water element is not demonstrable by this experiment, but by the supplementary one of heating a bit of the seemingly dry soil in a test-tube; the cloud of vapor which soon condenses to droplets on the cooler upper walls of the tube shows that in the interspaces between the soil particles a certain amount of water is also present. This soil film-water is very important, because plant roots or root-hairs penetrate it and extract from it numerous and various dissolved substances, at the same time absorbing a large excess of the water itself.

That the original soil contained a relatively large amount of a gaseous component, the ancients' air element, can be brought out by an arithmetical consideration. When we add 200 cc. of a solid to 200 cc. of a liquid in which it is insoluble, we would expect the volume of the mixture to total 400 cc. On inspecting our experimental cylinder, however, we find the volume of liquid plus that of the apparent solid to amount only to 300 cc. One-half of the volume of the soil used thus must have consisted of gas, filling the spaces between the grains, which the water drove out.

Near the top of the column there has now collected a mass of fragments which inspection shows to consist of disintegrated remains of plant bodies, or as it is technically termed, organic matter. If we should take this out, dry it and ignite it, a considerable amount of heat would be given off. Thus the fire element is also present; only we now apply to it the technical term energy. Originally coming from the sun, in the form of light, this energy was stored up by the plants which furnished the debris under observation. In a sense, then, the ancients were right,—there are four elements in our soil.

The modern scientific chemist, however, uses the term element in a different sense. His ingenuity has enabled him to recognize nearly a hundred elements underlying the ancients' four, and about one-tenth of these are so essential to plant growth that we shall have to spend the remainder of our time in their consideration. Their technical names are carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, phosphorus, sulphur, potassium, calcium, and iron. The chemist abbreviates them respectively to C, H, O, N, P, S, K, Ca, and Fe. (Most of these symbols are recognizable as the initial letters of the names, except K, which stands for Kalium and Fe, for Ferrum, the classical and international terms for the two elements concerned). They mostly occur in nature in combination with one another, in proportions which may be expressed by appropriate groupings of the several names or symbols.

Plants obtain much of their carbon from the atmosphere, which contains about one part of carbon dioxide, i.e., a compound of one part of carbon with two of oxygen, to every 3,000 parts of other gases. Their leaves absorb this carbon dioxide and with the aid of the sun's energy cause it to unite with water to form sugars, and in turn to build up the cellulose which makes up their body-framework. At the same time, however, it is quite essential that some carbon-bearing substances be present in the soil into which their roots extend, and in fact a mass of rock fragments becomes a soil only when organic matter gets incorporated into it. In nature, the leaves and other plant parts which fall to the ground gradually mingle with the underlying soil. The horticulturalist can hasten the process by plowing under plant material, either in the form of living grasses or legumes, or in the more or less decomposed forms known as compost, humus, peat, etc. From the standpoint of most plants a soil is fertile only after a considerable amount of organic matter has thus been added.

Hydrogen is not found free in nature in appreciable amounts, but is obtained by plants from water, which is a dihydrogen oxide, symbolized by H_2O . Plants in fact absorb far more water than they actually build into their tissues, transpiring the excess through their leaves. Practically all of this water has to be obtained from the soil by means of their roots. The bulk of the soil-water available to plants is present as films on the surfaces of or between soil particles. Another experiment may be performed to bring out certain phenomena of interest in this connection. In two similar funnels are placed respectively a sandy and a loamy soil, and equal volumes of water are poured over both. The water runs rapidly through the sandy soil, and of the 200 cc. added, 125 cc. soon collects in the cylinder below. Movement through the loamy soil is much slower, and only 100 cc. of water passes through. The water retained is held as films between the particles, and the finer-grained soil holds more water because its more numerous particles provide more interspaces for the films to occupy.

Plants for the most part do not thrive in a coarse sandy soil because of the unfavorable water relations. Much of the rain which falls upon such a soil runs through and gets too deep in the earth for the roots to reach it; and at the same time any film water which is retained tends to evaporate too rapidly from the surface. A dense clayey soil is unfavorable, on the other hand, because water moves through it too slowly to satisfy the needs of plants. Intermediate between these two extremes lies what is termed a loam, and this furnishes the most favorable conditions for the growth of most plants. Look at the cultural directions for nearly any garden vegetable in a seed catalog or book of instructions, and you will find a statement such as this, "This grows best in a rich sandy loam." What they fail to do is to tell how you can produce such a favorable soil from the yellow mud which you find in the area you have selected for a garden. Fortunately, by adding sand if the original substratum is too clayey, or adding clay if it is too sandy, the desired goal can ultimately be attained. The simplest sort of soil amendment, then, consists of adding material which though chemically inert is adapted to bring the soil to a texture more favorable for plant growth. Richness can be imparted by working into the soil an abundance of organic matter, and allowing it to decompose and become distributed through the mass of mineral substance.

In addition to the oxygen obtained by plants from water, they need an abundant supply of it in free, gaseous form, to carry out the process known as respiration. Their parts which extend above the ground have no difficulty in obtaining this from the atmosphere, but the roots must depend on that which diffuses down through interspaces between the soil particles. Another reason then for the value of the already mentioned sandy loam is that it permits the entrance of sufficient oxygen. Rock-plants often need an especially rapid supply, so we use extra coarse gravelly materials in our rock gardens.

With respect to nitrogen, the situation is a curious one. Over three-fourths of the earth's atmosphere consists of gaseous nitrogen, and yet flowering plants are apparently unable to make any use of it in that form at all. Some workers have claimed, to be sure, that they have found evidence that certain grasses can absorb and use nitrogen directly, but critical examination shows their technique to have been faulty. So far as we know, only the lesser plants, and in particular certain micro-organisms, can take gaseous nitrogen from the air, and combine it with oxygen and other elements so that it can enter directly into their life processes. Some of these organisms, such as one termed azotobacter, live free in the soil, while others attach themselves to the roots of leguminous flowering plants. So widespread and abundant are these tiny bacteria that it is estimated that they add to our soils annually nine billion tons of combined nitrogen. And when they die this dissolves in the film-water in the soil and thereby becomes available for absorption by the roots of higher plants.

Although Nature thus furnishes the larger plants with sufficient combined nitrogen to permit a moderate rate of growth, man often desires quicker results, and so uses nitrogen compounds as soil amendments. Formerly these compounds were gathered from places where geological processes had caused their accumulation, but now, with the aid of electricity, man produces them on a large scale, up to a million or more tons a year. These synthetic nitrogen compounds are now on the market everywhere, and fertilizer mixtures containing them in any desired amount can be purchased.

There is a tendency to apply nitrogenous fertilizers in too large amounts. Their immediate effect on plants is to stimulate vegetative growth, often at the expense of flowers and fruits. The leaf-tissue produced is relatively weak, and over-susceptible to disease. Since nitrogen is the highest priced element in fertilizers, commercial interests try to induce people to purchase it in large amount, but the scientist advises, for horticultural plants, keep the nitrogen content of your fertilizers as low as practicable.

Next in the list comes phosphorus. This element, unlike nitrogen, does not occur in the free state or in the atmosphere, but is found in the solid portion of the soil in combination with oxygen and basic elements, such as calcium and aluminum. These compounds are also concentrated in certain parts of the earth, and "phosphate rock" is mined in various places for the manufacture of fertilizers. They also occur in bones, and "bone-meal" is a valuable material for use in applying phosphorus to the soil. It dissolves in the film-water very slowly, however, and for quick results superphosphate is better. This element is in many ways opposite to nitrogen in its effects on plants. It makes leaf tissue firmer and more disease resistant, hastens blooming or fruiting, and increases the number of flowers or fruits produced. Moreover, an excess does little harm, for it soon becomes insoluble and inert as far as plants are concerned. My analyses of the soils around Philadelphia, indicate that they are rather low in this element. Sulphur, the next element on the list, will not be discussed here.

The element known to the chemist as potassium, which in combination with oxygen forms the base potash, is a third highly important plant nutrient. Like phosphorus, it is present in the solid part of the soil, and gradually dissolves in the film-water, from which the roots absorb it. It is also extensively added as a fertilizer, and may partially counteract the injurious effects of nitrogen (though not so efficiently as phosphorus). On the plant its most prominent effect is the stimulation of the formation of starch, and accordingly a fertilizer to be used for a crop such as potatoes should contain this element in abundance. However, our soils around here contain a reasonably high amount of potash, so that little need be added artificially.

Fertilizers are often labelled with a series of three numbers, which, at least in the north, stand for the three elements just discussed in the order named, a 3-8-5 fertilizer, meaning one which contains 3% of nitrogen, 8% of phosphoric oxide, and 5% of potash. Mixtures with various other ratios are on the market, and dealers often make exaggerated claims as to the merits of this or that special number. These must be discounted just as thinking people treat the fantastic claims as to the merits of certain laxatives, tooth-powders, and cosmetics made over the radio. In flower gardens of the Philadelphia region a ratio similar to that just mentioned can be expected to give good results, when applied at the rate of 200 pounds to the acre.

The soil amendment which has been longest used by man is lime, a combination of the element calcium with oxygen. This not only supplies an element which plants need in small amounts to build into their cell walls, but also has a profound and usually favorable effect on the physical and chemical properties of soils. A dense clayey soil often becomes more porous and as a result more suitable for plant growth when lime is applied to it; and when acid has developed in a soil, the lime will tend to neutralize it, and lessen possible harmful effects on plants. Just as in the case of nitrogen compounds, however, there has been a tendency under the stimulation of business interests to apply a harmful excess of lime to soils. We now have evidence that some plants thrive best in strongly acid soils, and the application of even small amounts of lime may injure them. In the lime-rich marl areas of New Jersey, where truck farmers formerly wasted considerably money by applying lime, now, as a result of the scientific studies of the State Experiment Station, we find them applying instead powdered sulphur, which is turned by bacteria into acid substances, bringing the soil to a favorable state for the growth of potatoes and certain other crops. Whether Rhododendrons and other shrubs favored by high soil acidity would also be benefited by sulphur is not yet known.

The last element specifically mentioned in my list was iron, but it is to be taken as representative of a group of elements which affect plant growth in peculiar ways. These are the elements which the chemist calls catalysts, elements which when present in often very minute amounts can stimulate chemical processes such as take place in the life activities of plants, yet do not actually enter into the make-up of the plant itself. As yet scientists have not established the exact number of these which exist, nor any general explanation of their functions, but many cases are now known where plants have looked yellow or otherwise sickly, and have been restored to health by adding to the soil a few pounds per acre of some compound of manganese, copper or zinc. Fortunately sufficient quantities of most of these elements are present in all normal soils, but methods will undoubtedly be worked out in the future for recognizing deficiencies which may exist locally. In addition to the familiar N-P-K, the fertilizer of the future is likely to contain two or three parts per million of a variety of elements, including some of the Earth's rarest and most peculiar ones.

THE RELATIONS OF PLANTS WITH EACH OTHER

(Lecture—February 19)

By DR. RODNEY H. TRUE

Professor of Botany, University of Pennsylvania

The earth's surface in general is fairly densely populated with plants of various kinds. There are green plants, herbaceous and woody; there is the host of dependent plants like the bacteria, the fungi and some of the flowering plants that have lost their chlorophyll and with it their ability to use sun energy and, being like the animals and mankind, have turned parasites and live on the products built up by the green plants. Hence, the relations of plants with each other, like the relations of people with each other, may be helpful or harmful.

PLANTS SOMETIMES INTERFERE WITH EACH OTHER

Plants interfere with each other's welfare in different ways and under different conditions. Plants of the same kind growing in a pure stand interfere with each other because the individuals have the same needs and compete with each other for all things. In the soil they compete for the supply of water and mineral nutrients. Above the ground they compete with each other for the light.

There seems to be much reason for the opinion that roots give off characteristic waste products to the soil in which they grow, and plants are thought in time to make the soil less fit for themselves and for others of the same kind. Hence, pure growths in time tend to require a change of position to get into new soil. In this connection, it will be noted that in nature mixed growths, making neighbors of different kinds of plants, is a common occurrence.

In pure growths of plants, as in dense populations of people, diseases spread more rapidly and with deadlier result than where individuals of the same kind are not crowded together. The principle of rotation of crops, now an established habit in agriculture, is practical recognition of the harmful influences mentioned above.

Plants of different kinds growing together may also compete for the advantages of position in the soil and in the air. We have the unending campaign against the weeds to illustrate this. In some cases plants have a vigor and habit of growth that gives them the upper hand, and they become weeds when they are not wanted. Some compete underground for the soil constituents and water, like the Canada thistle; some, like dandelions and other rosette producers, compete above ground for a place in the sun.

Some of the parasitic flowering plants adopt the criminal practice of assaulting their victims. Mistletoe seeds, wiped off on the branches of their host plant by the beak of some berry-eating bird, germinate and send their roots through the bark of the apple, poplar, gum or other tree that is fated to be the host, into the woody part of the branch in which the water supply passes from the root to the top, and the bush growing on the branch becomes a water thief. While the mistletoe makes its own food, it weighs down the plant host.

Another flowering plant has turned pirate completely. The little golden-colored dodder (cuscuta) winds its coils tightly about its green host plants, into which it thrusts its root-like suckers that absorb from the host not only water, but also the elaborated food materials prepared by the plant for its own use.

The most striking problems involving the relations of plants with each other, however, are seen in the relations of the lower sorts to the green plants grown as food crops or as ornamentals. All fungi lack chlorophyll, by the use of which green plants absorb the energy of sunlight, and all fungi, therefore, like us humans, are dependent on green plants for energy.

Some of these fungi are content to live on the decayed bodies of other plants and grow on rotting wood or on leaf mold. These so-called saprophytes hasten the end of the chapter in returning dust to dust, and are probably helpful as scavengers, always busy in the hastening decay of plant and animal bodies that would otherwise in time encumber the earth.

Most of the larger fungi, like the cultivated mushroom and its host of relatives that grow in the woods and fields, belong to this group. Many of the minute bacteria at the lower end of the fungal series are likewise saprophytes.

However, many kinds of fungi, like a few of the flowering plants, attack the living host and live as parasites. Here we find the long list of disease-producing fungi that the farmer and the gardener are obliged to combat. These parasitic fungi belong to several groups and each has its own way of living.

The powdery mildews form a net of threads that run over the surface of the leaf, into which minute suckers are thrust and through which the contents of the cells of the host plant are absorbed. The foliage of the lilac is frequently attacked by a powdery mildew. The powdery mildews in general do not cause as serious damage as fungi that live in the body of the host plant.

The downy mildews are such a type of fungus. The reproductive bodies germinate on the surfaces of the leaves, and penetrate either through the small pores (stomata) that are found in great numbers on leaves, or enter by forcible puncture of the leaf surface. Once inside the plant, the parasite grows with devastating rapidity, and soon is beyond the reach of anything that can be done to protect the host. If the leaf is sprayed or otherwise treated, so as to kill the parasite before it can get into the plant, protection may be had. This type of disease is specially serious in potatoes, and potato growers have found that spraying with fungicides at the proper time gives real protection.

A third type of fungus parasite, the smuts and rusts, live in the host, and do not press their attack so severely as to kill it promptly. Their demands are more moderate, and the crippled host may live out a long term of years. The rusts as a rule have the curious habit of living out a part of their life cycle in one host and finishing up in another. Thus one parasite may harm two hosts. This group of parasites furnishes some very serious problems.

For example, the white pine blister rust lives a part of its life on the wild current or gooseberry, the remainder in the pine; the rust on red cedar finishes its life cycle on the apple, hawthorn, or other member of the rose family; the wheat rust must pass a part of its life in the barberry bush. These rusts may be controlled if one host can be removed. Sometimes the breeding of disease resistant types offers a remedy.

Of the plant diseases due to the very low group of plants known as the Bacteria, it may be said that their number is legion, it appearing probable that there are as many bacterial diseases of plants as of animals. The destructive fire blight of apples, pears and their relatives, is due to bacteria often carried into the flower at blooming time by bees that in their quest for nectar pass from an infected tree to others, carrying the organism with them. The cutting off and burning of infected parts, with precautions against spreading the infection in doing so, is effective when thoroughly done. The Bartlett pear industry of California was saved by such a process. Many garden vegetables and berry shrubs suffer from bacterial diseases. The soft rot of callas is also due to bacteria.

The latest group of diseases to attract attention—the virus diseases—seem to be due to organisms that are too small to be seen by the microscope. They seem to multiply under favorable conditions and behave like living things. A great number of very destructive diseases are now traced to these viruses. A mottling of the foliage, known as the mosaic disease, is one result. Tomato vines, beans, corn, sugar cane, potatoes; in fact, most of our crop plants are known to have virus diseases that in cases are almost completely destructive. Tulips sometimes show striped flower parts as a symptom of virus infection. Dahlias also suffer seriously at times. Perhaps some of the foliage mottling, seen in variegated leaves, is due to mosaic disease. The finding and breeding of types not susceptible to the disease is the real remedy. The prompt removal and destruction, preferably by fire, of infected plants is a desirable sanitary measure.

PLANTS HELP EACH OTHER IN VARIOUS WAYS

The decayed remains of their bodies furnish the invaluable humus, so important in garden, field and forest.

Plants with erect stems often furnish supports for weaker climbers that use their stronger neighbors as a help in reaching a place in the sun, where their leaves can make food and their flowers secure the help of insects in passing on their pollen to other individuals.

On the other hand, some smaller plants are shade lovers and find their homes in the woods under the protection of the taller sorts. Ferns, violets, and other members of the charming population of forest floors illustrate one way in which plants help each other.

All plants need to get nitrogen in some usable form for their nutrition. Nitrogen as it exists uncombined in the air (of which it makes up 80%) is not available for most green plants, and sources of nitrogen that has been combined with some other element are of the utmost importance. Perhaps the chief source of combined nitrogen is the electric flash of the thunderstorm. In the fierce heat of the lightning bolt a little of the nitrogen combines with oxygen of the air, forming a little nitric acid that is diluted and carried into the soil by rain.

DRACAENA MASSANGEANA

But plants help each other in this respect: The soil is the home of a vast population of bacteria, and some of these soil types enter the root hairs and finally the slender roots of members of the Leguminosae (the bean family) and form nodule-like growths, in which vast numbers of the bacteria develop. These bacteria are able to do this because they can use the nitrogen of the air to build up substances in their bodies. When these nodules decay, the plant that harbors them gets this combined nitrogen. This ability to co-operate with the soil organisms makes clovers, alfalfa, beans, peas, locust trees, soy beans, and other members of this most important family a great resource in building up the fertility of the soil for all green plants.

So plants have many relations with each other—some helpful, some harmful—all interesting to us humans, because these relations directly affect our own welfare.

HOUSE PLANTS AND THEIR CARE

(Lecture—March 5)

By DAVID RUST

Consultant in Horticulture of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society

The first important item about house plants is that to succeed with them one must have a love for plants. Plants require the same care as human beings in regard to food, proper nourishment, cleanliness and treatment for diseases. The persons who love plants and are constantly working among them will find that an intuition will gradually develop between them and the plants, so that the plants tell them at one look what they need. This contact is difficult to explain, but it is similar to that between a mother and her child.

Plants will not succeed unless they have proper care. Horticulture is nature. We can assist nature but if we try to go against it we will fail. In placing a plant in a house, we are subjecting it to unnatural conditions as to air and moisture. Our rooms must be well ventilated every morning, and we must supply the required moisture by evaporation or spraying. Nearly all houses today are heated by steam or hot water. Steam is the most serious handicap but pans may be procured that can be hung back of a radiator to hold water and thus produce moisture by evaporation. Also, radiator covers may be procured that have a compartment for water. This moisture is good for you, your plants, and your furniture. At least every two weeks plants should be given a good spraying in a laundry tub or bath tub, when not taken outdoors for this purpose.

Another handicap to plants is that the good housekeeper is thinking of her furniture and rugs, and as soon as the sun comes in a window, down come the shades. If they are pulled up again when the sun has moved, it is all right—just so the plant gets good light; but often the shades are down for a long period and the plants are kept in the dark.

WATERING PLANTS. Many of the troubles of plants in the house are caused by too little or too much water. In a temperature of 70° the majority of plants require water twice a week. In potting a plant, there should be one inch of space between top of soil and top of pot. When watering the plant fill this space. This method usually provides sufficient water to soak the ball of soil in the pot. Never allow pots to stand in water. If plants are in jardinières, place a block of wood, or something of this kind, about two inches thick in bottom of jardinière for the pot to stand on, so that the pot does not touch the water that drains from plant. There are many things pertaining to watering of plants that can only be learned by consistently working among them. Many plants require a resting period, such as the succulents that require very little water during Winter.

INSECT TROUBLES. Red spider is probably the worst enemy of plants in the house, and thrives in a dry atmosphere. Constant spraying will prevent it, and cure it if present. Use clear cool water. Mealy Bug—Lemon oil used 1 to 20 will kill this. Use a small paint brush, dip this in the solution, then jab it into the crotches of the plant. For a bad infestation of Mealy Bug, use Lethane 420. A pint bottle of Lethane Jr. can be purchased—use 1½ teaspoonfuls to 1 quart of water.

Aphis can be easily eradicated by the following method: Dissolve one inch square block of Ivory Soap in one pint of water, add one teaspoonful of Black Leaf 40, and spray your plants with the mixture. This same remedy will keep down any small soft scale. If plants have any of the large brown scale, use an old tooth-brush dipped in the above solution. This scale must be moved to kill.

SOIL. The most universal soil is:

- 2 quarts of garden soil
- 1 pint of leaf soil
- 1 cup of sand

Potting—Place a piece of broken flower pot in bottom of pot to be used. Over this put some moss or decayed leaves, then some soil sufficient to bring ball of plant up to proper height. Fill in soil around ball of plant. Use a small stick to firm the soil. When placing outdoors in summer, repot any that require a larger pot. Give them all a dressing of sheep manure twice during summer, then before taking them into the house, give them a dressing of Bone Meal. Loosen up the soil each time before applying the fertilizer. The plants will not require any fertilizer while in the house.

BEST PLANTS FOR THE HOUSE. Palms — Kentia Belmoreana, Kentia Forsteriana, Areca lutescens, Phoenix Roebeleni, Pandanus Veitchi, Araucaria excelsa, Dracaena fragrans and D. Massangeana.

larger than the pot containing the fern, place some moss in of this extra pot, then place within the pot containing the fern and fill up the space between the two pots with moss. Keep the moss moist and the fern will not require so much water, and also there is an evaporation from the wet moss which is good for the plant.

Dieffenbachia Seguine, Aglaonema costatum, Anthericum picturatum and A. vittatum, Colocasia neo-guineensis, Vitis rhombifolia (grape ivy), Saxifraga sarmentosa, Pothos aureus Wilcoxii, Hoya carnosa (the last three for hanging baskets or pots). For enclosed porches, the following may be used: Fittonia, Peperomia maculosa, Jasminum grandiflorum, and Begonias.

JANUARY

Poinsettia plants purchased during the holidays should be kept at as even a temperature as possible, averaging between 60 and 70 degrees. Water the plants thoroughly every day. Even with the best of care they probably will soon lose their foliage, which is natural with poinsettias after they have flowered. Store them for the balance of the season in the cellar, giving them just enough water to keep the soil from getting bone dry. Then cut them back and force for the next season.

The Jerusalem cherry needs always to be kept wet. This plant also dislikes a dry atmosphere and will appreciate a sprinkling of water over the foliage daily. The foliage often drops off, more particularly if coal or illuminating gas is present. Save some of the fruits and plant the seeds in February for new plants the next season.

Try forcing lilies-of-the-valley. They enjoy the high temperatures often found in steam-heated homes and apartments.

Flower seeds should be ordered early, particularly the kinds that need to be sown in February, either in a sunny window or conservatory, such as the new annual Canterbury bells, the new cascade chrysanthemums, the new rudbeckia Kelvedon Star, delphiniums of various types that are wanted in flower this year, snapdragons, sweet peas, choice gaillardias, pentstemons of the Sensation type, exacum and Vinca rosea.

FEBRUARY

Grape vines can be pruned in most sections of the country from now on. Do not prune during freezing weather. Instructions can be found in the libraries of the horticultural societies or obtained from the state colleges.

Amaryllis bulbs that are in pots in the cellar need but very little water until they come into flower, after which they should be kept growing constantly until next Fall.

The pruning of fruit trees and ornamental shrubs may be done whenever the weather is not too cold. Fruit tree pruning should not be severe. Broken limbs and those which cross or chafe should be removed, always with a sharp saw. Shrubs which bloom early cannot be pruned now without sacrificing the Spring bloom.

Painting the egg clusters of the gypsy moth on tree trunks or buildings with creosote will greatly reduce the number of caterpillars next Summer.

The only pruning that wisteria vines need at this time is the removal of weak, straggly growths which do not have any short thick spurs or heavy buds on them that give promise of bloom this year.

MARCH

Work on the lawn can start sooner than most people realize. Grass seed may be sown on thin spots just as soon as the ground is no longer soggy. The annual raking of the lawn may be done at an early date. The time to do this work will depend upon the season but it will fall sometime within this month. Have the tools and grass seed in readiness.

Many kinds of dahlias can now be grown from seed. It is wise to start the seed early, however. Kinds to grow include the Coltness hybrids and even the large decorative types, the seed of which is often sold by dahlia specialists. Sow the seed in a frame or indoors to the depth of one-half inch.

Prune shrub roses where this is desirable. This applies especially to the rugosas. Cut the oldest canes back to the ground leaving the newer canes to flower this coming season.

One way to control insects is to destroy them now. Clean up all garden refuse from the corners of the garden and burn it, if necessary, over a brush fire. Many insects and diseases will be eliminated.

Have only a light mulch over crocuses, scillas, glory-of-the-snow and other bulbs that may be ready to bloom.

Uncover the pansy beds and work in a little fertilizer between the plants as soon as the ground is friable.

APRIL

Plant rose bushes as soon as the ground can be easily worked. Plant shrubs of all kinds. Lilacs need very early planting. Some are best transplanted from pots or with a ball of soil on the roots as, for instance, Japanese quince, azaleas and firethorn.

Sow seeds of sweet peas in well-prepared ground as soon as possible. They need a very early start. Garden peas, particularly smooth-seeded varieties, should be planted early. Give garden peas fertilizer rich in phosphoric acid and potash but not nitrogen.

Do the dormant spraying on fruit trees and evergreens and especially spray euonymus plants infested with scale insects with oil sprays. Roses should be sprayed with Bordeaux mixture or a proprietary mixture before the buds start.

Be sure to burn all rose prunings to get rid of insects and diseases.

Long-season annuals should be started from seeds sown in boxes of earth in the house or in hotbeds. They include asters, salvias, petunias, snapdragons, verbenas, blue lace flowers, salpiglossis and stock.

Gladiolus corms not previously treated for thrips this Winter may be immersed for five hours in corrosive sublimate solution prepared by dissolving one ounce in seven and one-half gallons of water. This treatment will kill even the eggs of thrips and also check diseases like dry rot, hard rot and scab.

The grass to use between the wide joints of paving stones in walks or terraces is New Zealand chewings fescue. This grass will even do well in the shade. Sow it now.

MAY

Inspect tulips and irises at this time for aphids. These plants may be seriously damaged by plant lice, especially in hot, sunny places. Spray with a proprietary, contact insecticide recommended for the purpose by seed stores.

Destroy tent caterpillar nests at once before trees and shrubs are defoliated. Entire colonies may be destroyed by cutting them off early in the morning or on cold days or by burning them with a torch. The foliage may be sprayed with arsenate of lead and the nests dusted with powdered arsenate of lead.

Protect rose foliage against insects and diseases by dusting or spraying. Treating the plants early and often will keep them healthy for the season.

Where iris borers have been a pest, spray the plants with arsenate of lead to destroy the young borers as they start to hatch. Make a second spraying two weeks later.

Bone meal is a fine fertilizer for lilacs. As much can be used as the pocketbook will permit. Cultivate it into the ground.

Control cutworms with a poison-bran bait. Make it by mixing one teaspoonful of Paris green with one quart of bran. To this add one cup of water sweetened with a tablespoonful of molasses. The mixture should make a moist mash. Scatter the bait around plants in the evening. Less fussy proprietary baits can be purchased from seed stores.

JUNE

If iris plants were infested with borers last year, inspect them now, separating the leaves to see if the borers have started to work. Look for watery places, which should be squeezed between the fingers to destroy the young borers.

Many hardy chrysanthemums grow too tall and leggy. It will make them more bushy to pinch out the tops at this time. Incidentally, there will be more flower stems. Keep chrysanthemums well watered.

Tuberous-rooted begonias, which give beautifully colored flowers in the shady garden, should be planted out of pots now if this has not been done. The everblooming begonias in many tones of red and pink and which like bright sunlight can still be set out from pots. They may be taken up and used as house plants next Fall.

Attend to the staking of tall garden flowers diligently as the season advances. Delphiniums need support to keep them from being blown down. As Fall asters, boltonias, helianthus and cosmos grow, give them strong support. There are handy garden stakes available which obviate tying.

Instead of training dahlias to one stalk, one may make them branch near the bottom to get bushier plants. When there are three pairs of leaves, pinch out the center of the plant.

JULY

Keep the garden roses well watered throughout the month of July. The Pernetiana roses, all of which have yellow or highly colored blooms, need to be kept in active growth to prevent black spot.

Seed sowing of pansies, English daisies and forget-me-nots especially will be in order early next month. None but the best seeds should be used. Orders may be placed now.

Protect hardy phloxes, golden glow, chrysanthemums, dahlias and other plants against mildew and other harmful diseases by keeping them sprayed or dusted with proprietary materials recommended by the seed stores for the purpose. Roses are most in need of being dusted or sprayed to control mildew and black spot. Pick up and destroy any rose foliage that has fallen to the ground.

Jerusalem cherry plants that have been set out in the garden for the Summer should be kept snipped back to make the plants bushy. Give them liquid fertilizer from time to time and keep them well watered.

In order to get more blooms on phlox, snip off the seed pods back to the first leaves when the blooms have faded. The plants will branch and flower again. Also by preventing seeding, there will be no wild plants, which should be avoided as they usually bear magenta-colored flowers.

AUGUST

Dwarf and bearded irises may be transplanted if the clumps did not flower well this season. Use only the strongest new growths. Enrich the soil well with bone meal before replanting. Some persons dig out the centers of old clumps and replace the soil with fresh compost instead of lifting an entire clump.

Plant freesia bulbs in deep pans or pots for forcing indoors or in the conservatory. In addition to white, there are lavender, rose and yellow flowering varieties. The potted bulbs are not to be stored in the cellar but should be forced in a cool place.

Plant the bulbs of Autumn crocuses and colchicums as soon as they are available. They will flower in a few weeks. The crocuses are better for rock gardens than the colchicums because of their small leaves.

Black spot and mildew may be much in evidence this month on roses unless the plants are well watered from week to week and the foliage protected with a fungicidal spray or sulphur dust. Discontinue feeding roses for the rest of the season.

Look for the lace bug, which is a small flying insect with transparent wings, on the undersides of rhododendron, mountain-laurel and azalea leaves. Spray with a strong solution of nicotine and soap or even oil diluted to the Summer strength in the proportions recommended by seed stores and spray manufacturers. Lace bugs may be on hardy asters and chrysanthemums. On them try sprays combining rotenone and pyrethrum, using a strong solution.

SEPTEMBER

September is the best lawn making month of the year. Since a lawn is permanent, it will be economical to prepare the soil thoroughly and to use the best seed available.

There is no time to lose in setting out Autumn crocuses, colchicums and madonna lilies. Add new interest to the garden by planting these bulbs now.

Daffodils may usually be left in the same place for a number of years. Make the ground ready for them now and plant the bulbs as soon as they are delivered. Enrich the soil with bone meal and wood ashes. Early planting will also benefit the snowflakes or leucojums and fritillarias.

This is the conventional month for transplanting peonies. Clumps that have not flowered may be set too deeply. The top eyes or buds should be only two or three inches underground. Mix bone meal in the ground before planting new roots. Leave old clumps alone unless transplanting is absolutely necessary.

Everblooming roses give their best colors in Autumn. This is an excellent time of year to judge the plants. Make visits to neighboring gardens now and make a planting list of varieties to be ordered this Fall.

Lilies that make small bulbils such as sulphureum, tigrinum and bulbiferum may be propagated by removing the bulbils and planting them one inch deep in beds or boxes of loam.

OCTOBER

Rock gardens for the next year can best be made this Fall. This will allow the soil to settle. When building a rock garden dig away the top soil and place drainage at the bottom before setting the rocks. Strive for a natural garden with an adequate background of shrubs and evergreens, which can be transplanted now.

Fall is the best time to set out bleeding hearts, columbines, globe flowers, hepaticas, leopardbane, Spring-flowering anemones and Trillium grandiflorum.

Geraniums that are to be stored over Winter should be dug now and planted in pots or shallow boxes. Firm moist soil around the roots. Keep the plants in a cool cellar. It is practically impossible to store geraniums in heated cellars by the old-fashioned method of hanging the plants in bundles from the rafters.

Autumn is the best time to transplant lilacs. Many fine named varieties are available which will flower within a very few years after planting. If the plants are grafted, set them deeply enough so that there will be no suckering from the roots. Spread well-decayed cow manure around old established plants as a Winter mulch.

Japanese lily bulbs may be late in arriving but if the ground is prepared for them now and covered deeply with a mulch they may still be set out after the rest of the ground is frozen. It does lily bulbs no good to be stored over Winter. Many lily bulbs are available now and may be planted at once.

NOVEMBER

Seeds of shrubs having hard or bony coverings usually require stratification during the Winter. If they have fleshy coverings crush and wash them off first. Then lay the seeds between layers of sand in a box, keeping them properly labeled, and allow the box to stand outdoors for the Winter. The seeds will be ready to sow in the Spring.

Clean up the old stalks and dying foliage of peonies, hollyhocks, delphiniums and irises to aid in eliminating plant diseases and insects. Also gather and burn the dead rose leaves.

Many amateurs plant their sweet pea seeds in late Fall. Prepare the soil, digging the trenches deeply and mixing the manure in the bottom layers and bone meal in the top layer. The seed can be sown late this month.

Make the annual clean-up of cornstalks, dahlia stalks and all hollow stems that might contain corn borers or other insects. The stalks must be burned or buried.

Palms and other broad-leaved house plants that may be infested with scale insects should have their leaves washed on both sides with a strong soap solution or a contact insecticide diluted to the proper strength. Cut off the old fronds of ferns if they are harboring scales.

Poinsettias in the house should be kept growing rapidly in a warm but not too sunny window. Always be careful never to let the plants get dry. Apply liquid manure occasionally. Never let the plants get cold at night or they will drop their leaves.

DECEMBER

Mulch rhododendrons, especially plants set out recently, with a deep covering of peat moss, oak leaves, or even well rotted manure. Other ericaceous plants including mountain laurel, azaleas and evergreens may also be given a winter mulch.

The best mulch for lilacs is rough manure put on now and dug into the ground in the Spring.

Shrubs not reliably hardy in the north, such as gordonias, some of the evergreen barberries, abelia and some kinds of brooms will retain more old wood if they are hilled high with soil or protected with leaves enclosed in wire.

Blue or pink flowered hydrangeas which make strong growth in northern gardens, but usually do not flower, should be left unpruned and the tops protected with a covering of leaves. Tree peonies also need protection in the colder states. The covering in both cases is necessary to preserve the tip-end buds. Put tubbed hydrangeas in the cellar.

Shallow pools should be drained and filled with leaves or straw for the Winter. Allow the drain to remain open.

Start paper white narcissi and lilies-of-the-valley at intervals in order to have a succession of blooms. The French Roman hyacinths can be brought into bloom quickly.

ANNUAL MEETING

NOVEMBER 20, 1935

The Annual Meeting of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in the Insurance Company of North America Building, 1600 Arch Street, Philadelphia, on Wednesday, November 20, 1935, at 3.00 P. M., with the President, Mr. C. Frederick C. Stout, in the Chair. Re-election of the following members to serve on the Executive Council for the next three years was announced: Mrs. J. Norman Henry, Mr. Morris R. Bockius, Mr. W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., Mr. J. Franklin McFadden, Mr. W. Hinekle Smith, Dr. Rodney H. True, and Mr. John C. Wister. Mrs. Walter King Sharpe, of Chambersburg, was elected as a new member to the Council for the three year term, and Professor E. I. Wilde, of The Pennsylvania State College, was elected for two years to fill an unexpired term.

Reports were presented by the president and secretary, in which the activities of the Society for the past year were reviewed briefly and some of the plans for the coming year were mentioned.

The meeting concluded with the special feature of the afternoon, an interesting lecture on "The Flora of the Lesser Antilles," by Mr. Fairman R. Furness, of Media, a member of the Executive Council. Mr. Furness illustrated his talk with forty water-colors, painted by himself from pen and ink sketches made during various winter sojourns in St. Croix and other islands of the West Indies.

The meeting was attended by 104 members.

THE REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

NOVEMBER 20, 1935

It is at the Annual Meeting of the Society that the President makes his Annual Report and renders an account of the activities of the Society and of his stewardship.

Anticipating a lower income in 1935 than in 1934, the standing committees of the Society made careful estimates of cash requirements for the year. Budget and income are working out according to estimated figures and we have every hope to end the year without a deficit. The Treasurer's Report, based upon figures of accountant's audit, will be published in the Year Book.

We began the year 1935 with 3,363 members, gained 327 and lost 443, making a net loss of 116 and paid-up membership of 3,247. With improved economic conditions, we hope to regain some of the members we have lost and have written these persons asking them to rejoin. Twenty-one Life Members have been secured this year, twenty of these were transfers from Annual Membership, and one new Life Member.

Serious consideration has been given this year to the project of increasing our membership throughout the State and, thereby, our activities. A Committee was appointed, with Dr. J. Horace McFarland as Chairman. The original thought was that we might, ultimately, form Chapters in various centers. A preliminary survey of the situation is going on to ascertain if there is a real and practical approach to this project.

Early in 1935, two members were added to fill vacancies on the Executive Council: Dr. Rodney H. True, Head of the Botany Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and Professor E. I. Wilde, of the Horticultural Department of The Pennsylvania State College. Today we have elected another new member, Mrs. Walter King Sharpe, of Chambersburg, in addition to seven members who were re-elected. The By-Laws of the Society have been amended to permit an increase from 21 to 30 members in the Council, thereby providing places for representatives from the various sections of the State, when and if needed.

Two honorary members have been elected: Captain Kingdon Ward, of England, a famous plant collector and explorer and also an author of horticultural books, and Miss Isabella Preston, of Ottawa, Canada, who is well-known for her hybridizing work with Lilies, Lilacs and Malus species, at the Canadian Experimental Station.

The services of the Garden Consultant, Mr. Rust, have been in constant demand, and he has acted as judge at twelve Flower Shows.

We would call again to the attention of our members "Horticulture," the semi-monthly periodical of the Massachusetts, New York, and Pennsylvania Horticultural Societies, as being a great help to amateur and professional gardeners, and to our ever-increasing library, which affords to our members what is probably the largest and best single collection of books and manuscripts devoted to horticulture within the State.

Before closing, I wish to express my very keen appreciation of the services rendered by the Committees, and by those members of our Council and of the Society who have taken part in our Lecture Courses. Put together I feel it has been a fine exhibition of co-operative effort in making available to all of our members information sought in the great and important field of horticulture.

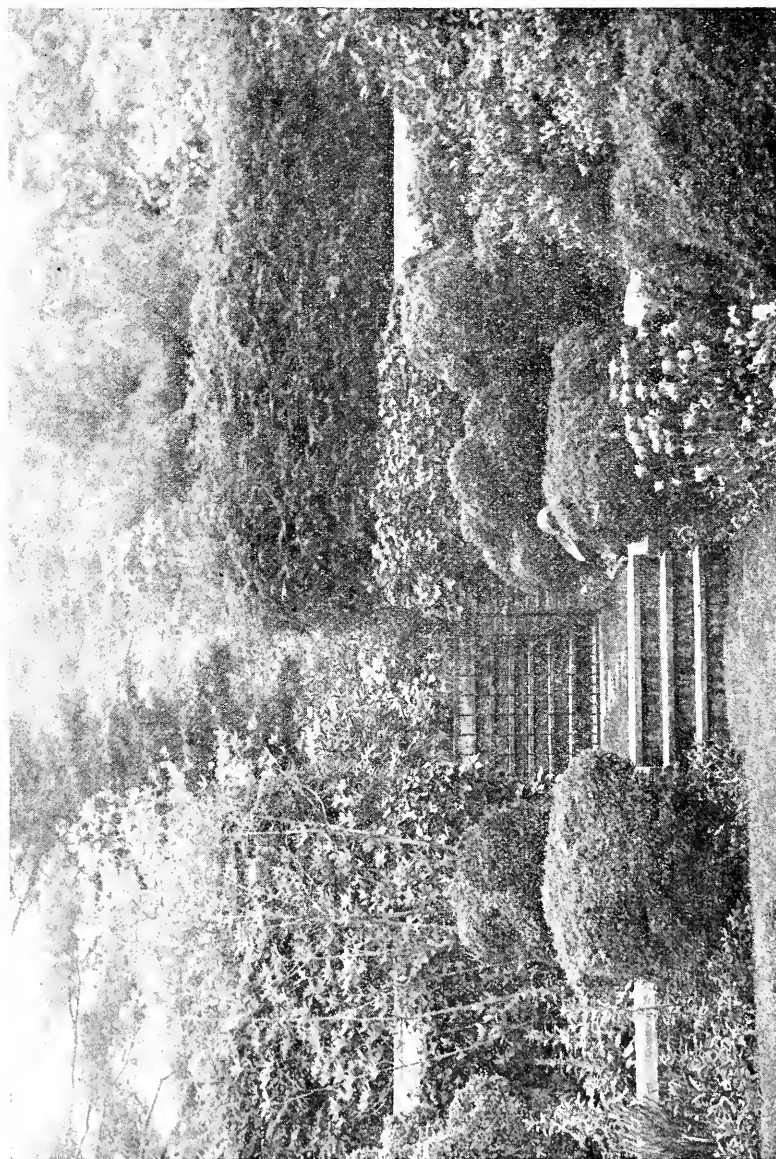

I should be remiss if I did not express my thanks for the faithful services rendered by the members of the office organization.

C. FREDERICK C. STOUT,
President.

SECRETARY'S REPORT FOR 1935

The first activity of the Society in 1935 was a course of five lectures, two of which were on botanical and scientific subjects, and three distinctly horticultural. It was evident that a large percentage of members prefer the illustrated horticultural lectures. Therefore, it was decided to continue these in 1936, and to present a subscription course for the benefit of those who desire more advanced and serious lectures.

The next major activity of the Society was the Philadelphia Flower Show. During the week of the Show, on March 26th, the Society held a successful subscription dinner attended by more than 150 members and distinguished guests. From the point of view of attendance, however, the evening dinner was not as popular as mid-day luncheons had been in former years, and, therefore, the Committee in charge will probably plan a luncheon for the 1936 Flower Show week entertainment. The principal speaker at our 1935 dinner was Dr. Lee A. Strong, Chief of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington, and he gave us a most interesting talk on "Plant Importations." His subject was of particular moment at the time because shortly before this the Department of Agriculture had announced that the Daffodil Embargo which had been in effect since 1925 would be lifted in December, 1936. At the next meeting of the Executive Council after Dr. Strong's address to the Society, a resolution was passed expressing gratification at the presentation of the policy of the Bureau of Plant Quarantine, and endorsing the present attitude of the Administration in this respect and begging the Secretary of Agriculture to adhere to this policy which had already been attacked by commercial interests who desired to use the plant quarantine as a tariff.

In addition to Dr. Strong, other speakers at the Flower Show Dinner were Mr. J. Hansell French, State Secretary of Agriculture, who told of the work of his Department; Mrs. Mortimer J. Fox, of New York, author of gardening books, who spoke of her gardening experiences; Dr. J. Norman Henry, Director of Public Health in Philadelphia, whose subject was "Gardening as an Avocation," and Mr. Don Rose, the Philadelphia columnist, who recited an amusing poem in which he presented the lighter side of the Daffodil Embargo.

• This year, the Library has had over thirteen hundred visitors, and over six hundred books have been borrowed by members. The Library Committee is especially interested at the present time in enlarging the collection of books dealing with the flora of particular localities and many valuable volumes of this nature have been added recently.

In addition to thirteen hundred visitors to the Library and eleven hundred general visitors to our rooms, there have been sixty meetings held in our Council Room and offices by the Executive Boards of various groups whose interests are similar to our own. We have also been represented at meetings of other organizations, as follows: Mrs. William T. Elliott acted as the Society's delegate to the Annual Meeting of the Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania in Overbrook in May, Mrs. Alvan T. Markle, Jr., represented the Society at the Federation's semi-annual meeting in Pittsburgh in October, Mr. J. V. Hare, Mr. Rust and your Secretary attended the National Shade Tree Conference in Philadelphia in August, Professor E. I. Wilde represented us at the Anniversary Meeting of the National Association of Gardeners in Pittsburgh in August, and Mrs. Thomas Newhall has been our delegate to the meetings of the Elizabeth Price Martin Fellowship, the Powell House Garden Committee and the Pennsylvania Co-operating Conservation Council.

Your Executive Council, upon the recommendation of the Pennsylvania Forestry Association, sent letters to United States Reprerepresentatives and Senators endorsing House Resolution 6914 to provide Federal aid to States in acquiring State Forests, and sent a Resolution to Governor Earle in March urging repair of the Lehigh Canal between Point Pleasant and New Hope in order to provide a proper flow of water through the Canal.

The Society was glad to give its assistance to the Judging Course sponsored by The Garden Club Federation and held in this building last February, and we also endorsed the educational talks presented by the Philadelphia Branch of the National Association of Gardeners given from time to time last winter. We have shown our friendship for our sister societies of Massachusetts and New York by exchanging gold medals with them for important awards at Flower Shows.

Our members have been generous to us again this year in presenting books to the Library and plants and flowers for the rooms. We are very grateful for these gifts and are still hoping that some day some member more blessed with the world's goods than the rest of us may wish to give a substantial sum to the Society so that we may extend our activities and undertake new work impossible with our present income. One member showed his interest in the Society by giving us a small cash subscription this year, and it was encouraging to us not on account of its size but because it showed that he was in sympathy with our aims.

JOHN C. WISTER,
Secretary.

ONE OF THE PRIZE-WINNING FLOWER ARRANGEMENTS
PHILADELPHIA FLOWER SHOW, 1935

REPORT OF THE EXHIBITION COMMITTEE FOR 1935

The Exhibition Committee is happy to report that in 1935 the Society co-operated in the Philadelphia Flower Show in March; presented a Dahlia Show in September, with the assistance of the Norristown Garden Club; and staged a Chrysanthemum Show in October at 1600 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia Flower Show (March 25-30) was an outstanding success. The plan, designed by Mr. Thomas W. Sears, a member of our Executive Council, was most attractive, particularly the central section which gave the effect of a large formal garden. From a round pool in the center of this section, paths were laid out in geometrical design. An harmonious color scheme was obtained by edging the paths with blue hyacinths against a border of yellow acacias from Mr. Joseph Widener's superb collection, which in turn were flanked by high evergreen hedges. Suitable garden statuary added to the attractiveness of this garden, and vistas leading the eye to other features in the hall were cleverly arranged.

The Society, as usual, took complete charge of the classes designed for garden club members and other amateurs, and these were planned and staged by a very efficient and devoted Committee under the excellent Chairmanship of Mrs. Otho E. Lane. A new feature introduced by your Society at this Show was a set of colored lantern slides, showing the origin and growth of the rose, in an electrically operated projector. We co-operated with the Philadelphia Branch of the National Gardeners' Association by assisting in financing their attractive and educational exhibit of a model greenhouse and a pruning exhibit. Our Society paid the expenses incident to transporting and staging the interesting exhibit of the New York Botanical Garden which showed foods of the world and their origins. The Society was glad to devote some of its space to The Botanical Department of the University of Pennsylvania for an exhibit in connection with the work done at Morris Arboretum. Your Exhibition Committee considered that all of these exhibits had great educational value, and warranted our hearty support.

The Annual Dahlia Show was held in City Hall, Norristown, on September 20 and 21, with the valuable co-operation of the Norristown Garden Club. The quality of flowers was excellent, owing to the favorable growing season, and the attendance was most gratifying, especially in the evenings when the visitors were very numerous. The W. Atlee Burpee Company decorated the large stage of the main hall with a splendid collection of dahlias, comprising all types of this flower. There were 361 entries in the show, a larger number than usual due to the co-operation of the Norristown Garden Club.

The Hardy Chrysanthemum Show was held at 1600 Arch Street, Philadelphia, on October 30 and 31. In addition to the entries called for in the schedule, there were many special exhibits not in competition. Collections shown by the Arthur Hoyt Scott Horticultural Foundation, Swarthmore; Elmer D. Smith & Company, Adrian, Michigan; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; Henry F. Michell Company, Philadelphia; and others, added greatly to the exhibition. Weather conditions were favorable to producing good flowers, and so many entries were received that more space will undoubtedly be necessary in 1936.

A list of the awards made at the three exhibitions in 1935, and a list of awards made by the Society at Flower Shows of other organizations, follow.

Respectfully submitted,

J. V. HARE,

Chairman.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON GARDEN AWARDS FOR 1935

The Committee on Garden Awards visited thirty-one gardens in 1935, and upon its recommendation, the following awards were made:

A Gold Medal to Mrs. Samuel P. Rotan for her outstanding estate at Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa. The garden, copied after the design of the Henry VIII garden at Hampton Court, is located in front of the terrace at the end of the house. A sunken garden of rectangular shape, it constitutes in its features of masonry, statuary, and surrounding hedges, shrubbery and trees, and in the selection of its plant material, a perfect example of good taste in gardening. Restraint, so difficult to attain, and yet so essential as a feature in artistic design, is everywhere evident. The sense of intimate enclosure pervades. It is a garden of unusual beauty.

The house, a fine example of Tudor design, faces a spacious lawn, with tall straight-trunked trees, and a distant prospect of unusual beauty over the Whitemarsh Valley. The entrance, on the opposite side of the house, looks on a wide rising slope, beautifully formed into grassy terraces by three stone walls, surmounted by a spacious orchard. A long winding grass walk, flanked by a wide variety of shrubs, which skirts one side of the lawn, leads to a series of circular stone-paved platforms, designed for the entertainment of guests. Specimen trees and shrubs abound. Charm is the prevailing characteristic.

A Silver Medal to Mr. and Mrs. Orville H. Bullitt for their residence, "Oxmoor," at Whitemarsh, Pa. From the back of the house,—a modern one of beautiful design,—a spacious stretch of open field extends to the gentle hills which bound the upper Wissahickon. And in this charming setting lies the garden. This is a walled garden of triangular shape. Within this triangle are formed three smaller triangular beds, each surrounded by a hedge which is quite novel. For these hedges, instead of being box or privet, are formed of espaliers of apple. The effect is unique. The garden is appropriately planted with flowering fruit trees and shrubbery. Passing through a gateway one comes to another charming enclosure with flower beds and a rose garden. It is evident that Mr. and Mrs. Bullitt take a keen personal interest in their garden, and that much of the work is done with their own hands.

A Silver Medal to Dr. and Mrs. John H. Gibbon for their home, "Lynfield Farm," Media, Pa. An ancient farmhouse, unspoiled by any attempt at so-called "restoration," backed by a great stone barn showing an unbroken wall of unusual beauty, provides the keynote to this charming place, and all the surroundings have, with faultless taste, been developed in harmony therewith. At one end of the house a walk, consisting of a series of stone steps from terrace to terrace, flanked with border planting, leads down to a swimming pool nestled in a lovely enclosure of shrubbery. All unpretentious, but alluring—in keeping with the character of the house. At the other end of the house lies the herb garden, quite unique in its spaciousness, and its wide variety of sweet smelling and pungent plants. The unusual charm of this peaceful spot was enhanced by the loving enthusiasm and botanical lore displayed by Mrs. Gibbon in showing her treasures.

A Silver Medal to Miss Alice G. Howland and Miss Eleanor O. Brownell for The Shipley School Cottage Garden, Gladwyne, Pa. This is a flower garden par excellence. From the terrace of the house,—a farm house restored and enlarged,—the garden extends by a gentle downward slope, with a luxuriance and brilliance of bloom quite unsurpassed. All that technical skill, unstinted enrichment and a discriminating taste in the blending of colors can do, has here been done. Lying surrounded by trees in a spacious lawn, with a distant prospect of hills beyond the Schuylkill as a background, the garden is a lovely one. At the foot of the garden, flanked by a low stone wall, lies the rose garden. Several rows of very narrow beds stretch side by side for a long distance through a perfect piece of lawn, and the rose bushes in these beds bear an unusual profusion of bloom. The effect is charming.

A Garden Certificate to Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Kohn, of Merion, Pa., for their small garden of real beauty. This garden stands as an excellent illustration of what fine feeling and good taste may accomplish in a yard at the rear of the house.

A Garden Certificate to Mr. and Mrs. Edwin M. Lyons, of Bala, Pa., for their attractive garden at the rear of their home. This small garden owes its charm to the skill and enthusiasm of Mrs. Lyons. She has here created a perpetual source of joy and quiet pleasure.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM J. SERRILL,

Chairman.

REPORT OF THE LECTURE COMMITTEE FOR 1935

In the early part of 1935, a series of five lectures was presented before the Society, three being on horticultural subjects and two dealing particularly with botany. The lectures were given on Tuesday afternoons in the auditorium of The Insurance Company of North America Building, 1600 Arch Street, Philadelphia. Arranged chronologically they were as follows:

January 15. "Twenty-five Years with Roses and Other Posies" (Illustrated), Dr. J. Horace McFarland, Editor of The American Rose Society.

January 29. "How Plants Use the Soil," Dr. Edgar T. Wherry, Associate Professor of Botany, University of Pennsylvania.

February 5. "The Golden Age of the Garden" (Illustrated), Professor Frank A. Schrepfer, School of Fine Arts, University of Pennsylvania.

February 19. "The Relations of Plants with Each Other," Dr. Rodney H. True, Head of Botany Department, University of Pennsylvania.

March 5. "House Plants and Their Care" (Demonstrated), Mr. David Rust, Garden Consultant, The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

The Society also co-operated with the Philadelphia Branch of the National Association of Gardeners in a course of six educational talks which were presented during the winter, on Tuesday evenings.

Respectfully submitted,
ANNA ELLIOTT,
(Mrs. William T. Elliott),
Chairman.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE FOR 1935

The Library now numbers 4,050 volumes, 172 books having been added during 1935. Thirteen hundred and thirty-seven visits have been made to it, 830 books have been borrowed by members in person and 65 books have been mailed to members. Sixty-four books were donated to the Library by the following persons, to whom the thanks of the Committee are sincerely extended: Mrs. Stephenson LeBoutillier, Mrs. Thomas Newhall, Mr. W. I. Rudley, Mr. J. E. Spingarn, Mr. Romaine B. Ware, and Mrs. J. Norman Henry.

May I say here that books on horticultural or allied subjects are most gratefully received by the Library Committee, and that gifts of money with which to purchase books from members or Garden Clubs are always most deeply appreciated.

Respectfully submitted,
MARY G. HENRY,
(Mrs. J. Norman Henry),
Chairman, Library Committee.

CONSULTANT IN HORTICULTURE

For the benefit of the newer members of the Society, we wish to explain that the services of Mr. David Rust, the Society's consultant in horticulture, are available to all of the members. He will visit their gardens, regardless of size, to advise about gardening problems, the only charge being for his actual traveling expenses. Appointments should be made in advance for such visits. Mr. Rust also is available for consultation at the office of the Society. He is usually in the office all day on Monday (except at times of flower shows), but it is better to telephone for an appointment on other days. He is not available on Saturdays. Members are urged to make use of Mr. Rust's services, which we consider a valuable and unique privilege of the Society.

During 1935, Mr. Rust visited 68 gardens, gave advice to 106 members in the office, advised 84 members by mail, and assisted in judging 12 flower shows. He also gave lectures before four Garden Clubs.

The subjects about which Mr. Rust was most often consulted in 1935, with the comparative number of inquiries in 1934, are as

THE USE OF PLANT MATERIAL FOR LANDSCAPE AND GARDEN

Abstract of Lectures delivered in Series of Special Lectures on Plant Material, January 7, 14 and February 4, 1936

By PROFESSOR FRANK A. SCHREPPER

School of Fine Arts, University of Pennsylvania

Any attempt to discuss, within the limitations of a very short period of time, a subject so broad in scope and character as the use of plant materials in Landscape Architecture, creates an attitude of reluctance, more because of the necessary omissions than because of the inclusions. The element of personal preference is also operative and requires no apology as it is beyond the bounds of reason to expect to exclude this element in the process of sifting the tremendous amount of material which would be of interest and significance.

About 7,000 species and varieties of woody plants could be grown in the vicinity of Philadelphia. Of this number, which doesn't include the vast list of rose varieties, possibly 1500 species and varieties are more or less readily available for use in landscaping and gardening developments. To select and to discuss in a period of less than three hours any list that might prove to be adequate seems a physical impossibility. It seemed desirable, therefore, to frankly choose about ten percent. of these subjects for brief discussion and evaluation in the course of the lecture. Some of the items discussed are not readily available but have some qualities which would make them valuable additions to the list of landscape subjects. Trees constitute the most permanent, and usually, the dominating features of a landscape or garden composition. A study of tree characteristics indicates that while many have one or more characteristics of interest the choice must necessarily be narrowed down to those species or varieties which either exhibit some positive feature of form, floral display, rate of growth, etc., or that are peculiarly adapted to some special condition or use. It is usually a matter of concentrated interest and attention on one character, or seeking a balance of all characteristics. The trees included in the list discussed in the lecture represent those species and varieties desirable in the Philadelphia region, that encompass the full range of size, floral display, foliage habits, immunity to disease or insect attack or ability to grow under unusual soil or exposure conditions. For example, Paulownia tomentosa is interesting because of the color of the blossoms, unique among the trees of this region. It must be fully recognized that Paulownia has form and growth habits that exclude it from use under many conditions. Some of the species included in the tree list can be classified as small trees or tree-like shrubs; thus Koelreuteria paniculata is included along with Chionanthus retusa because both plants exhibit special floral characteristics. The former blooming during the high summer season when most of the trees and shrubs have finished blooming, while the latter is notable for the extremely prolific display of highly fragrant flowers of unusual form.

The shrub list, it will be noted, passes over entirely certain of the most interesting genera such as the Berberis, Cotoeaster, Syringa, Spiraea. Each of these groups and several others in both tree and shrub groups, notably Crataegus, Prunus, and Malus, would engage one's interest for a longer period of time than that allotted to the discussion of the entire field. Shrubs constitute the secondary or semi-permanent elements of the landscape composition. Interest in shrub species and varieties is likely to be concentrated on more intimate characteristics; foliage habits, giving color and texture to the plant as well as determining its fundamental form habit constituting an important element of the uses of shrubs. Brilliant floral display in many instances succeeded by an equally brilliant display of fruits makes some species and varieties of shrubs particularly valuable on the home grounds or on small estates where owners and visitors have opportunity for frequent and intimate observation of the plants. Under these circumstances a shrub which might commend itself for a highly prolific display of flowers for a relatively short period of time might, because of poor form, poor foliage characteristics, or lack of interest through the entire seasons be excluded in favor of a subject with a less spectacular but more general season interest.

Shrubs offer wide opportunity for detailed observation of the unique and the unusual (as in the case of Helwingia) as well as an unusually long season of bloom (as in the case of Indigofera amblyantha) or a markedly unusual color of blossom (as in the case of Colutea media or Vitex agnus-castus). Thus a study of the list should be made from the point of view of the potential interest of the individual shrub or tree rather than the point of view that the list constitutes a summary of a "best" and "finest."

Each season's crop of catalogs brings tidings of a new crop of novelties, oddities, improvements, etc., in the field of the real heart of the garden problem—flowers! Bulbs, annuals, biennials and perennials—each with its own contribution of interest and charm. Here the problem is not a lack of material to test the sales-resistance of the chronic novelty seeker—rather it is to make a selection among the many offerings. For the average gardener, some method should be devised by which the merits of new introductions, aside from the experience and frequently disheartening one, of trial to discover an error of judgment.

The devoted enthusiast has a right to wax lyrical over a difference in shading of color not apparent to the naked and less critical eye of the "general" gardener. Point of view is important in judging new introductions. The qualities that excite the hybridizer, enthuse the commercial gardener, or enthrall the specialist, may be lost in a garden, where the individual plant must function not only as it is, but also as part of the whole garden picture. Slowly and surely, our gardens are being enriched by the loving and patient work of the devoted researcher in laboratory, green house, and nursery row. The honors go equally to the scientist, the "practical" horticulturist, and the faithful "amateur."

cialist's collection of plants, is a symphony, not a group of instrumental soloists: a chorus, not a series of vocal "stars." Here comes the parting of the way—point of view is the sign post.

In general there are many things that make a given species or variety of plant significant in the garden scheme. As to the flowers—it may be the size, shape, or color of the individual blossom; the form of the inflorescence (try to think of the new hybrid Delphiniums divorced from the long slim shaft of color rising above the foliage masses!), it may be the season—early to late—or it may be the length of the season of bloom. Occasionally, it is a radical departure from the "normal" color pattern of that species.

As to the plant itself, size is of first importance—from tiny, feathery Arenaria, to robust, vigorous, and domineering Bocconia. It may be form—a small, compact rosette; a flat mat of leaves, hugging the ground; a loose open mass, or a tall slender spire. It may be foliage habits—leaves that appear early, stay fresh and green through drought and surfeit of rain, and decorate the border, wall, or rockery until frost. It may be the infinite variations of the central theme of green foliage—gray green, yellow-green, blue-green—a soft coat of silvery tomentum, or a shining, leathery surface. It may be a pattern in foliage: delicate and feathery, or large and heavy. It may be a special merit: dependability—you know that your peonies will reappear year after year, if you treat them with a modicum of respect. Then there are plants that just naturally "go well with anything"; plants that "fill in" when other plants fade away to rest or go to seed. Every gardener has his own formula for the "best" plant: let it be so! When the final, perfect, ultimate and all-inclusive plan for the garden has been developed, may I find another outlet for my interest and joy in living things that grow out of the earth, adorn the earth, and make it a fit abode in spite of machines, men, power and politics.

INSECT ENEMIES OF TREES AND SHRUBS

Abstract of Lecture delivered in Series of Special Lectures on Plant Material, January 21, 1936

By H. GLEASON MATTOON

Consultant in Arboriculture

President, The Pennsylvania Forestry Association

Entomologists estimate that there are 50,000 species of insects which attack trees and shrubs. Most of them are of minor importance, though many of them may become serious if the natural balance between injurious and beneficial insects is disturbed. Of over one hundred species which attack oaks possibly ten might be called of a serious nature.

As an example of a secondary insect which becomes of primary importance due to the decrease in its enemies, we have the White Marked Tussock-Moth, which does so much damage in urban Philadelphia every year. The greatest enemies of this insect are several species of birds, which normally were plentiful in the cities along the Atlantic seaboard. With the introduction of the English sparrow, these birds were driven from the cities. This imported bird does not feed on the caterpillars of this moth, with a result that it has increased rapidly.

All insects attacking vegetation are divided into two main classes, according to the manner in which they obtain their food. In the first class, the mouth parts are elongated into a pointed hollow tube which is used to puncture the epidermis of the tree or shrub and through which the plant juices are drawn. In other words, this is a sucking insect. Since it obtains its food from the inner portions of the tree, it is not possible to put a stomach poison on the tree, and, thereby, kill the insect.

In this class are found the aphids, mealy bugs and scale insects. This group can only be killed by coating them with some liquid or dust which clogs the breathing pores and thereby smothers the insects, or by applying some liquid which will burn them. The most common spray material today for this class of insects, particularly when applied in the dormant season, is a miscible or emulsifying oil. There are many on the market under various brand names, usually called spray or scale oils. Miscible oils should not be used on sugar maples, walnuts or magnolias. For summer spraying, a nicotine sulphate or one of the pyrethrum mixtures is most commonly used.

The second large class of insects have chewing mouth parts. The mandibles serve to bite off portions of the tree which the insect devours. This large group is divided into two main sub-groups: first, the leaf eaters, those which feed principally on the leaves of trees and shrubs. These are controlled by spraying the leaves with some stomach poison, such as arsenate of lead. In the second sub-group are the wood boring insects, those that feed on the wood of the trees or shrubs. They gain their sustenance by biting off, swallowing and digesting particles of wood. In doing this, they usually make holes in the trees, hence they are called borers.

Many of the boring insects do not attack healthy trees so the first preventive against this class is the maintenance of the tree in a healthy, thriving condition. Borers may be controlled by the injection of some substance into the burrow which will smother or burn the insects to death. In the past the most used material has been carbon disulphide. Today, there is sold a substance known under the name of "Bortox," which is easier to handle and about as effective.

Of the scale insects, the following are the most common around Philadelphia:

1. Rose scale—Control: Spray of miscible oil during the dormant season.

2. Euonymus scale—This is one of the most difficult scales to control since it has many broods during the year. A miscible oil at the rate of one part to fifteen parts of water just before the new growth starts in the spring seems to be the most effective measure.

3. San Jose scale—This imported pest did great damage during the early years of this century. By concerted effort, its numbers were decreased but it is again on the increase. It attacks practically all fruit, shade and ornamental, deciduous trees and shrubs. It is easily controlled by spraying with a miscible oil at the rate of one part to twenty of water. This spraying should be done just before growth starts in the spring.

4. Oyster shell scale—This insect has a variety of hosts, attacking principally ash, poplars, mountain ash, lindens, elms, maples, and walnuts in addition to fruit trees. A miscible oil is effective against it. The young hatch at the time the petals of the apple blossoms are falling. By spraying at that time with nicotine sulphate, they may be destroyed.

5. Scurfy scale—This most frequently attacks elms, although it has several other hosts. A delayed dormant miscible oil spray is effective.

6. Golden Oak scale—This attacks only oaks and prefers those of the white oak group. This insect is of European origin and was brought into this country accidentally several decades ago. Apparently, native parasites have learned to aid us in keeping it under control because the years of severe infestation occur only periodically. A miscible oil spray during the dormant season when the temperature is above 45 degrees will control this scale insect.

7. Tulip scale—This is one of the soft scales. The young hatch in late August and for a few days crawl around on the branches before settling down. At this time any contact spray, such as nicotine sulphate, will kill them. A dormant spray of miscible oil is also effective against the half grown adults which winter over.

8. Elm Bark Louse—This is a European insect and is another of the multitude of insect and disease enemies of the elm which make the growing of this tree so difficult. It is easy to control with an oil spray but less easy to see. Careful inspection will show the dark scales embedded in the crevices of the bark. Around the circumference of the insect will be found a white waxy secretion.

Of the many leaf-eating insects which assist in defoliating shade trees the following is a partial list of the more serious:

1. Elm Leaf Beetle—This European insect became unusually plentiful during the last decade of the nineteenth century. Since that time, it has spread well over the eastern part of the country and is doing an unusual amount of damage because of the time of the year in which it attacks the leaves. If a tree is defoliated even partially before it has had an opportunity to develop buds for the following year, the weakening effect is much greater. Most of our shade trees form their buds for the following year in June.

The beetle winters over in the adult stage under the bark, in trash, under stones and in buildings, and starts feeding with the first warm days after the leaves have opened. In early May it lays orange-colored eggs on the underside of the leaf and by the tenth most of these eggs have hatched. The young grubs are voracious feeders and soon skeletonize the leaves by devouring all but the upper epidermis and veins. There is usually a second and third brood of this insect each year in this locality. However, an arsenate of lead spray at the rate of four pounds to one hundred gallons of water with the addition of some sticker, such as ordinary bread flour, applied about May 10 should control this pest.

2. Bag Worm—This is a curious insect which in the larval stage constructs a bag made of the leaves of the trees on which it is feeding held together by silk, in which it lives during the entire caterpillar stage. It is particularly fond of arbor vitae, blue spruce, white pine, red cedar and a variety of other trees. It winters over in the egg stage in the bag. The eggs hatch about the first of June and the young caterpillars crawl out to the leaves of the tree and start feeding, immediately constructing the bag in which they live. It takes very close inspection to see the caterpillar at this time but by training the eye on the plant during a quiet day, you can see the movement of these caterpillars as they feed. By spraying by June 15 with arsenate of lead at the rate of four pounds to one hundred gallons of water with a sticker, this insect may be destroyed. If the spraying is delayed until later in the year, control will not be as effective. The bag may also be picked off during the winter.

3. Fall Web Worm—This insect winters over in the larval stage in the ground. The adult moth emerges in July, mates and eggs are laid on the leaves during the latter part of that month. These eggs hatch within about seven days and the young caterpillars immediately spin a web in which they live. As they skeletonize all the leaves within the web, it is enlarged to take in other leaves. Once the web is made, it is almost possible to direct a spray with sufficient force to penetrate its fine construction. The spray should be applied by July 20 whether many young caterpillars appear on the leaves or not and should be composed of arsenate of lead at the rate of three pounds to one hundred gallons of water. This insect feeds on a variety of deciduous trees, principally black walnuts, English walnuts, hickories, black cherries, and elms.

4. The Spiny Elm Caterpillar—The adult of this leaf-eating insect is commonly called the Mourning Cloak Butterfly because of its resemblance in coloring to the cloak of those in mourning. It is one of the few butterflies to live over the winter in the northern part of this country in the adult stage. It hibernates under rocks and in crevices and is apparently unharmed by successive freezing and thawing. The caterpillars which appear in May feed gregariously and, thereby, entirely defoliate a branch of their favorite food plant, the elm, within a few days. Spraying with arsenate of lead is effective, if applied early in May. There is undoubtedly a second brood.

5. Yellow Striped Oak Caterpillar—These yellowish caterpillars which feed in colonies usually appear late in June. They feed most entirely on oaks and occasionally, due to their plentifulness, do considerable damage. The adult is a large beautiful moth, bright reddish yellow in color, with black dots on its forewings. It may easily be controlled by spraying with arsenate of lead or some other stomach poison.

6. The Buck or Maia Moth—While not as common as the yellow-striped oak caterpillar it occasionally does serious damage to oaks and certain other trees, particularly willows, hazels, and black cherries. The moth is a beautiful, black, semi-clear winged insect. The caterpillar which, when full grown is about two inches long, has a red head and tawny body with black spines along the back. The eggs are laid in the fall by the moths which emerge from pupal cases in the ground. They are deposited in small masses encircling the twigs. They winter over in this stage and the caterpillars usually hatch about the middle of May. Spraying with a stomach poison will control them.

7. Pine Saw Fly—This insect, the adult of which looks similar to a large wasp, winters over in the cocoon stage. In the spring these elongated, symmetrically round, brown cocoons may be seen with the top neatly cut off. This indicates that the adult has emerged and undoubtedly is laying her eggs on the favorite host plants, which are pines. The eggs hatch in early June and the young grubs or caterpillars, yellow in color with rows of black spots on the back, may be seen feeding in groups on the needles. They may be hand-picked or destroyed with a stomach poison, such as arsenate of lead.

Of the borers, I will mention only a few. The control measure in almost every case is either the cutting out of the insect or the injection of some substance, such as carbon disulphide or Bortox, which will kill the grub in the burrow.

1. The Leopard Moth—This is also a European insect which in some manner was brought into this country through the port of New York about 1888. The adult moth has a wing spread of about two inches and is most attractive, being a clear white with black spots well distributed over the wings. The eggs are laid on the branches of various deciduous trees and shrubs and the young grub hatches and bores into the stem. The borer grows very fast so it is frequently necessary for it to leave the stem in which it is working and crawl to a larger branch. During this time, it is the prey of many birds.

This insect has a two-year life cycle. It pupates just under the bark and when the moth is to emerge the pupa works its way partly out of the branch or trunk. Frequently, these empty skins may be seen protruding from holes in lindens, lilacs, elms, various maples, and other trees.

2. The Maple Borer—This insect, the adult of which is a clear-winged moth whose most outstanding characteristic is a tuft of red hairs at the posterior end, lays its eggs usually along the edges of a wound or abrasion on a tree. The borers feed on the inner bark and cambium and cause the enlargement of the wound, thereby doing serious damage. Careful inspection will show their presence by the frass which is exuding from the entrance holes. They may be cut out or killed by the injection of some substance.

3. Locust Borer—This insect has become such a pest on black locusts that this species of tree is seldom planted today. The adult is a long-horned beetle, dull black in color and beautifully striped in bright yellow. The beetles lay their eggs in late August and September and within a short time the grubs hatch and bore into the wood. The borers are very destructive and frequently trees are broken or killed because of their work. They are so plentiful that control measures are almost impossible. Since the adult prefers sunshine, trees that are in groups or groves are seldom as much damaged as individual specimens which have bare stems.

DISEASES OF TREES AND SHRUBS AND THEIR CONTROL

Abstract of Lecture delivered in Series of Special Lectures on Plant Material, January 28, 1936

By H. GLEASON MATTOON

President, The Pennsylvania Forestry Association

The diseased condition of a tree is frequently very closely related to physiological troubles. If a tree or shrub is growing under unnatural conditions or is affected by extremes of temperature or moisture, the normal growth processes are retarded or restricted. In other words, the tree is weakened and, like a human being when in a weakened condition, it is much more subject to the attack of various disease agencies.

During the last few years we have had such extremes of temperature in winter and an excess or deficiency of moisture in the summer that many species of trees have reacted adversely to these conditions, notably oaks, Bhotan (Himalayan) pines, and beeches. In the case of the former, the extreme droughts of 1930 and '32 had such a weakening effect that the two-lined chestnut borer attacked them. This beetle seldom attacks a thoroughly healthy tree, but once the host's resistance is broken down the adults lay their eggs on the trunk. The grubs bore through the bark and feed on the cambium.

With the beeches a somewhat different reaction took place. Due to the drought mentioned previously many of the roots in the upper fifteen inches of soil were killed. With this reduction in the root system, the relationship between the top and the root area was so badly thrown out of balance that many of the branches became weak and died. With the weakening of these branches, the common flat-headed borer, Chrysobothris, attacked the inner bark and cambium which hastened death. In addition, a cankerous condition developed on many of the larger branches, presumably due to a fungus of the Nectria type. Between these two agencies many of the limbs of some of the fine, old beeches died. Certain persons believe that death was due to a new type of disease but I question this, particularly, since the application of a heavy mulch of top soil and leaf mold under the tree together with adequate feeding with a complete fertilizer has been sufficient to cause many of these beeches to throw out great quantities of new growth and regain their former vitality.

An illustration of the disastrous effect of the extreme frost may be found in the almost complete destruction of the Himalayan pines, Pinus excelsa, in the Philadelphia area. While several fungi have been found in these dead and dying pines, cross sections show very definite dead areas which were first killed by frost. On the branches these dead areas increased frequently in concentric circles and the culture of the wood in these dead circles showed the presence of fungi. The few remaining pines of this species will undoubtedly languish as the fungus spreads through the living tissue.

One of the most common reactions of trees to extremes of temperature is what is known as frost crack. This is a longitudinal cracking of the bark and wood of the trunk due to uneven contraction in a quick drop in temperature. Occasionally, these frost cracks will extend up and down the trunk for a distance of five or six feet to a depth in the trunk of six or seven inches. If the frost crack is not too deep, the tree will overcome the trouble without treatment.

There are, however, many fungi which of themselves take a great toll of our tree and shrub life. One that is a general subject of conversation among pathologists around Philadelphia is known as Ceretostomella sp. This is a comparatively unknown disease, the determination of which has only recently been made. It is presumably the cause of the death of over 2,000 Oriental (London) plane trees in suburban Philadelphia during the last five years. The dying was first noticed in the Beechwood section of Lower Merion Township and has since spread to other localities in Montgomery and Delaware Counties. Apparently, the fungus enters the trunk and spreads radially, clogging the sap channels and causing the death of the trees. So far as I know, mycelia of this fungus have not been found in the roots and infrequently in the branches.

Externally, the first indication of the presence of this disease is the smaller and sparser leaf development. The next year the tree is usually dead. A year or two later plane trees on either side of the dead one present the same weakened effect. It is frequently noticed that the disease will spread throughout a whole row of trees in three or four years.

There is another fungus which does serious harm to plane trees, particularly the American plane or sycamore. The fungus is known as Gnomonia veneta. It winters over in infected twigs and leaves. Fruiting bodies appear in the early spring and are blown to the newly developed leaves. In years of plentiful moisture it is not uncommon to have the first crop of leaves on the American plane trees entirely destroyed. This disease may be controlled by spraying with Bordeaux mixture when the new leaves are about one-half grown and if the season is very moist, a second spray should be applied three weeks later. The general recommendation is six pounds of powdered Bordeaux mixture to one hundred gallons of water. Pruning to remove the infected twigs and the raking up of the leaves are both actions which will aid in the control of this disease.

Another trouble which is engaging the attention of the public just now is Dutch elm disease, Graphium ulmi. As you no doubt know, this fungus entered the United States from Europe on elm logs or burls which were shipped to this country for veneering purposes. In addition to the disease the logs contained beetles of the genus Scolytus, which it has since been learned, are one of the agencies by which the spores of the fungus are transmitted from one tree to another. While the logs were lying on the docks at New York, Baltimore, Norfolk and other ports of entry, the beetles left the logs and flew to nearby American elms, thereby infecting them.

After the disease was discovered in New Jersey, in 1933, investigation brought out the fact that several of these logs had lain in a lumber yard in Brooklyn for several months. During this time undoubtedly many beetles left the logs and flew to surrounding trees.

To the layman, the first indication that an elm has been attacked by Graphium ulmi is a sudden wilting and yellowing of the leaves on portions of the tree. If a branch so infected is cut, there will be found a brown discoloration in the current year's sap wood. Since the disease travels through the sap channels, its spread to all parts of the tree is rapid.

While hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in research and sanitation programs, no control has been discovered except the immediate removal and destruction of the infected tree. At the Dutch Elm Disease Laboratory there is also being carried on a program of removal of all weak and dying elms in the infected area. This is done because the Scolytus beetles breed in weak trees. If the normal breeding places are removed, there presumably will be greater opportunity for controlling the increase of the beetle. While there are other fungus diseases which cause an elm to react in much the same manner, particularly Cephalosporium, it would be wise to report to the Dutch Elm Disease Laboratory in Morristown, New Jersey, any unusual wilting or dying of elms which you may have on your property. Complete cooperation by property owners will help in keeping this disease under control.

There is a group of wood-rotting fungi known as the Polypores. The fruiting bodies of this class you have all seen at one time or another. They are of a typical mushroom type and several of them are edible. If you examine the fruiting body or mushroom, you will see countless minute openings from which the spores have been blown. These spores are the seed of the fungus. The mushroom might be called the seed pod. Since all fungi are vegetative organisms, the spores must have moisture in which to germinate. If the spores from one of these fruiting bodies are blown to a wound or abrasion on a tree and there is ample moisture, they will begin to grow, throwing out mycelia or roots which penetrate the wood, destroying the lignum. The destruction of lignum is the action that is known as decay or rot. Most of these fungi attack the heart wood principally.

There is another class, similar in its attack, known as the Fomes group, which produces multiple fruiting bodies. They are the shelf fungi which are seen growing on the trunk or branches of trees. New spore-bearing growth is added to the old fruiting bodies annually. These also are heart-wood destroyers.

As nature plans things, these heart-rot fungi might be classed as beneficial for, were it not for them, our forests would be such a mass of fallen and broken trees that no new growth could spring up. These are the wood rots which help to change dead and dying trees through the process of decay back to forest litter. In our ornamental trees, we seriously object to the holes in the trunk or branches which are caused by these fungi. Curatively, there is little that can be done about them. The filling of a cavity with any of the now used materials is of questionable value except from the aesthetic standpoint. As all of these fungi require ample moisture with which to grow, the process which will retard growth is that which will keep the cavity as dry as possible. The painting of the cavity with coal tar or other tree paint is satisfactory from the standpoint of appearance but does not check any fungus growth which remains.

In small cavities, it is practical to clean out all of the decayed and diseased tissue and to paint the wound with a fungicidal tree paint, such as that which was developed on the west coast for orchard sanitation work. This one may be mixed at home and is composed of: one pound of powdered Bordeaux mixture, one pound of raw linseed oil, six ounces of powdered lamp black or Scotch soot. The Bordeaux mixture and raw linseed oil should be mixed together first and then the Scotch soot stirred into the mixture thoroughly. This will be found thicker than ordinary tree paint but it should not be thinned.

Another class of fungi attacking the inner bark or cambium are called the Nectria type. Physically starting as a small depressed area on the bark, the fungus gradually sends its mycelia through the surrounding live tissue, always enlarging the area thus killed. These fungi are more damaging to a tree because they are killing the growing tissue of the tree. If observed in time, that is, before the dead area is of any size, they may be checked by carefully cutting away all diseased tissue and painting the wound with the paint outlined above. In cutting away such dead wood, a very sharp instrument should be used and the wound should be shaped to an acute angle at either end to facilitate healing.

Another very interesting group of fungi are the Rusts. These require two hosts in order to complete their life cycle. One of those rusts with which the suburban property owner is bothered has the common red cedar, Juniperus virginiana, as one host. It spreads from the cedar to the leaf or fruit of the apple tree, doing serious damage. Another cedar rust has the hawthorn as its alternate host. The white pine blister rust which was introduced into this country accidentally some twenty-five years ago has caused much destruction among white pines. For an alternate host this has plants of the genus Ribes—currants and gooseberries.

Control measures are difficult except by the destruction of one of the hosts. In the case of cedar-apple rust the legislatures of several states have passed laws, permitting orchardists to go on adjoining property and remove cedar trees within a certain distance of the orchard. Spraying is seldom satisfactory because it is necessary to anticipate the rain in early spring which will be warm enough to cause the spores to develop and spread. No spray has been developed which will kill a developing fungus. In other words, the sprays used, whether lime sulphur or Bordeaux mixture, are preventives. The part of the plant subject to attack by the fungus must be coated with a fungicide before the spore lodges. This will prevent the germination of the spore.

In the hawthorn-cedar rust, if a coating of Bordeaux mixture is maintained on the leaves from the first of May until the fifteenth of June, this will ordinarily prevent the defoliation of the hawthorn by this rust. The number of sprays to be applied depends upon the number of rains during that period.

Another disease which is particularly damaging to pears, apples, hawthorns, and cotoneasters is commonly known as Fire Blight. It was given this name because of its effect on the tree which is so similar to the effect of fire. The disease frequently enters a blossom or leaf and rapidly spreads through the twig. A branch so affected has a shrivelled bark usually covered with black pustules. The leaves adhere to the branch and have a dark brown appearance typical of singeing by fire. While this disease does not usually kill the entire tree, it frequently disfigures it. The only known control is to cut out the infected parts as soon as possible. The cut should be made at least ten inches below any apparent infection and as an added precaution the cutting tool should be disinfected with mercuric chloride or some similar material.

Another disease about which little is known is Maple Wilt, which affects principally sugar and Norway maples. In many respects the branch so infected presents an appearance similar to that of fire blight. The leaves adhere in a shrivelled condition. If the wood is examined, it will be found to have dark blue-black streaks running through the sap wood, indicating the spread of the disease through the sap channels. If anything this trouble is more difficult to control than fire blight, but the same precautionary measures should be carried out. In addition, it would be well to see that the trees have ample plant food and water.

During the last few years, portions or all of hundreds of sugar maples have been killed either by maple wilt or a condition known as staghead. The latter is a name applied to the dying back of the top of the tree. The cause is not generally known. There may be several contributing factors. In all cases, it is wise to see that trees are thriving.

Particular attention should be given to Austrian pines around Philadelphia. There is a comparatively new trouble which has been given the name of Needle Blight. This fungus attacks the newly developing needles when they are about one-half inch long, killing them and then spreading into the twig. During the first year of the attack, twigs are usually killed back for a distance of about four inches. Below this point new buds are formed. During the second year the needles developing from these buds are also attacked and the disease spreads farther back into the branch.

Usually the ends of the lower branches are attacked first and as these branches are killed the disease spreads to the branches higher up in the tree so that it is not uncommon to see all of the lower branches entirely dead with only a tuft of live growth at the top.

There has been much discussion and agitation about this trouble but it is not difficult to control. However, the control measures must be carried out very carefully and thoroughly. First, during the winter all dead branches should be removed. Next, the infected ends should be cut back with a sharp instrument to the point where new buds have been formed. The parts thus removed should be burned. Next, in the spring just as growth starts, a spray of Bordeaux mixture at the rate of six pounds to one hundred gallons of water should be applied. If the season is wet a second spray will undoubtedly be necessary three weeks later. If these measures are carried out thoroughly, this trouble may be eradicated.

I have discussed a few of the countless diseases which commonly attack trees and shrubs in this area. You may feel that I have been remiss in not giving more specific control measures but, frankly, with all of the research that has been carried on, we yet know little of the procedure necessary to check the ravages of many of our fungus troubles.

Since we know of no substance which can be applied to a tree to check or kill a fungus which has already become established, obviously the most important program is to maintain a tree in a healthy condition. Prevention is far more satisfactory and much less expensive than attempting to check the ravages of a disease that has become established.

COME OFTEN TO THE LIBRARY

By MARY G. HENRY

(Mrs. J. Norman Henry)

Chairman, Library Committee

We in the Library will be happy if more members will visit us this year than ever before. Our reading room is a quiet, comfortable and pleasant place in which to spend that odd hour or so between engagements, while on a rainy day an entire afternoon in the Library will pass rapidly and profitably.

We have books that will help both the beginner and the advanced gardener with every problem that may arise. We recommend "The Garden Guide," edited by A. T. DeLaMare, and "American Home Book of Gardening," by Leonard Barron, for "would-be gardeners" and those who have only recently taken up gardening. Newer books that have the same purpose in view are "The Garden Notebook" and "Another Garden Notebook," by Alfred Putz, and "The Gardeners' How Book," by Chesla C. Sherlock.

Specializing in a particular family of plants, which is so popular these days, is a most absorbing type of gardening and opens up a wide field for study and experimentation. The new lily book—"Lilies," by Woodcock & Coutts—is the most intensely interesting and informative book that has ever been written on lilies and contains a veritable mine of information. Dr. Small of the New York Botanical Garden has recently written a much needed book on native ferns—"Ferns of the Vicinity of New York." We have been waiting for this book for a long time and we find it even better than we anticipated. It tells us all we want or need to know on the subject and is beautifully and accurately illustrated.

For those interested in Azaleas and Rhododendrons, it is good news to know that Dr. C. G. Bowers has published a splendid large volume which contains in addition to its fund of information, many excellent colored and black and white illustrations. It is entitled "Rhododendrons and Azaleas." There is a splendid new book on "Clematis," by Ernest Markham, with a chapter on Clematis for American gardens by J. E. Spingarn. This should be read by everyone who grows or wishes to grow any of the many highly decorative members of the Clematis tribe.

The Amaryllis Year Book, which is the organ of the American Amaryllis Society, contains a most interesting and valuable collection of articles, all by distinguished specialists, on plants belonging to the Amaryllis family. There is a new and exciting book for cactus lovers—"Cactus," by A. J. Van Laren—in which the colored illustrations are particularly beautiful. The companion volume—"Succulents"—by the same author is perfectly splendid too.

For orchid growers or for those who wish to grow these beautiful and not too difficult plants, we have recently obtained Sanders' Orchid Guide and "Orchids" by James O'Brien.

In the belief that very many of our members are interested in the feathered visitors to our gardens, we have added several excellent books on birds, including "Birds of Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey," by Witmer Stone, "Birds of America," edited by T. G. Pearson, and "Field Guide to the Birds," by R. T. Peterson.

And now a word about magazines. It is a well-known fact that descriptions and illustrations of new and rare plants usually appear in magazines first. We have all the best ones on our rack, and they merit our careful study. Some of the most interesting of these are:

Horticulture, National Horticultural Magazine, South African Country Life, New Flora and Silva, Bird Lore, and the publications of the various single flower societies, such as the Bulletins of the American Dahlia Society and the American Delphinium Society, American Forests, and the Gladiolus Review.

HOW TO ATTRACT BIRDS TO THE GARDEN

By EDWARD H. PARRY

President, Wyncote (Pennsylvania) Bird Club

Winter—Birds are such indispensable destroyers of weed-seed and insects that gardens could not exist without them. Species are fewer in winter, but actually more individuals will respond to our offer of adequate food, water, shelter, and protection from enemies. Japanese honeysuckle is bird-haunted, and clematis blooms again—with cardinals and white-throated sparrows.

Garden plants cannot furnish food enough. Have trays and hoppers filled with cracked corn, hemp, millet, sunflower seed, broken peanuts, and suet. Food should not be scattered broadcast, especially not on loose snow, although it may be put on trampled snow or bare ground, if there is shrubbery or other cover nearby for the birds to fly to in times of danger.

Cover suet with wire, half-inch mesh, or stuff it into a "suet-stick"—a two-foot piece of wood with fairly smooth bark, suspended vertically, the sides bored with numerous three-quarter inch shallow holes. Suet on the ground attracts dogs. Keep the bird bath in use, or substitute a terra cotta saucer. Warm water does not freeze instantly.

Put up several new nesting boxes without crowding the old ones. Fasten them vertically, or facing a little down, never up or into the full sun or driving rain. Birds want practicable, weather-tight, cat-proof houses, without frills. Keep flicker and purple martin boxes closed until their rightful tenants are due; otherwise starlings will move in before the others come north. Bluebirds need and deserve special help. There should be houses for them around fields and gardens, and in every orchard. A one-and-one-half inch entrance keeps out the starling.

Spring—Postpone pruning and trimming in March, for they deprive birds of food and shelter. Try to save a tangle and a field of long grass for summer nests. Plant a corner with things birds love—spicebush, arrowwood, elder, bayberry, etc. Clean out nesting boxes, ready for occupancy, and see that they are hung securely. Do not hide them in foliage.

Plant berry-bearing shrubs that attract birds. Not all are favorites. Juniper, inkberry, euonymus, hawthorn, blackhaw, beautyberry, amelanchier, several bush honeysuckles and dogwoods, and other species mentioned herein, are among the best.

Summer—Clean, fresh water is necessary. Birds like a shallow bath, with sure footing.

It is trying to have birds take our cherries, but it would be a greater loss to lose the birds. Robin, cedar waxwing, catbird, oriole and others all help us elsewhere—and where can birds turn for fruit when we despoil their natural supplies, cutting out wild places, hedgerows and tangles? However, there are excellent cherries which birds like less than others, and there are trees and bushes, including mulberry and elaeagnus, with whose fruits we may draw the wildwings away. The bird bath will also help do this.

Cardinal, catbird, meadowlark, grackle and other native birds destroy large quantities of Japanese beetles. So does the starling, but it is doing us irreparable harm by driving out several birds whose invaluable work it cannot possibly do.

Putting a bell on pussy's collar does not solve the cat problem. Though better when belled, cats move so stealthily when stalking prey that the bell rarely rings, and, anyway, not all the bells in the world could give wings to a baby bird in the nest. Nor are dogs running at large among ground nests and fledglings as innocent as they look.

Feeders will help keep birds in the garden, without pauperizing them. Most summer birds are insectivorous, and meat is the principal food of all baby birds; but mothers, such as cardinal and song sparrow, will welcome for themselves, while brooding, a quick lunch of grain.

Hummingbirds visit delphinium, bergamot, rhododendron, honeysuckle, trumpet-vine, etc.; also red-jacketed phials of sugar-water—all the sugar the water will hold in solution.

Goldfinches, dropping at intervals to cosmos, zinnias, and marigolds, as if taking note of their development, remind us to leave seed for the autumn flowering—the goldfinch on the withered stem!

Autumn—With the departure of most insectivorous species, seed-eaters come from the north to help with the weeding. Put off much of the clean-up and trimming until early spring. Birds will destroy weed-seed for us, and they must have thickets and dense bushes and hedges for cover and winter roosts. A good shelter for ground-feeding birds is made of two hotbed sashes, resting in the rear on a log and, in front, on an elevated bar between two posts.

The United States Department of Agriculture will furnish details of English sparrow control. As English sparrows diminish in number, native birds increase. Where squirrels are too numerous, request the Game Warden to trap them for removal to wilder country.

Lay in a quantity of grain and arrange for later quick deliveries when needed. Abundant feeding in October will persuade birds to winter in the garden. Only by feeding when their need is not great can we hope to reach them when, in winter, they urgently need our help. Of course, having begun to feed them, we dare not stop. Prepare weatherproof shelters and hoppers and stock them well, especially if planning short absences from home.

RULES AND AMENDMENTS

1. The rules contained in "Robert's Rules of Order Revised" shall govern the Society in all cases to which they are applicable and in which they are not inconsistent with these By-Laws.

2. These By-Laws may be amended by the Executive Council at any regular or special meeting by the affirmative vote of a majority of the entire membership of the Executive Council, provided a notice of the proposed amendments has been sent to the members of the Executive Council with the notice for the meeting; or they may be amended if proposed at an annual or special meeting of the Society and recommended by a majority vote of those present, when submitted by letter ballot to the members, a two-thirds favorable vote of the ballots cast being required.

JANUARY

Snow that is spreading upon specimen evergreens or bending down hedges should be carefully shaken off before the damage becomes permanent. Heavy ice coatings should be removed from shrubs, especially Spring flowering kinds, so that the flower buds will not be damaged.

When water collects in heavy drops in terrariums open the cover with a match and let the air circulate through to remove the excess moisture, and also wipe the cover dry.

In the conservatory, sow seeds of Vinca rosea, lobelia, verbena, ever-blooming begonias and salvia, to get plants for early bloom in the garden.

The hardy phlox Miss Lingard is propagated only by cuttings. If clumps can be brought into the conservatory now, cuttings may be taken which will root in sand.

Seeds of pansies, forget-me-nots and English daisies may be sown inside now for Spring bedding work. Order browallia seeds to plant early next month.

It is not too early to test the left-over seeds so that with the arrival of the 1935 seed catalogues adequate supplies may be ordered.

Overwatering of the crab or Christmas cactus at this time will make the flower buds drop off. However, do not let the plants go dry.

FEBRUARY

In the event of mild weather, make the rounds of the garden, pressing back into place plants thrown out with the frost. Newly planted irises, peonies, rock plants, pansies and perennials may have their crowns and roots exposed.

See that the coverings of all plants like boxwood, rhododendrons, retinosporas, and the like have not been displaced with snow and winter storms. The strong sun of the next two months will be hard on all tender evergreens.

It is possible to grow many kinds of dahlias from seed. There are, for instance, the new Unwin's dwarf quilled hybrids which are bedding plants, but large-flowered kinds can also be grown from seed. Early sowing in a frame or indoors is necessary, however, and seed should be obtained at once. Sow in early March.

Flowers can be had late in the Summer from delphiniums grown from seed sown in the conservatory or sunny window at this time of year.

After freesias, hyacinths, narcissi and tulips are through flowering, keep them growing as long as possible. Spray them with a contact insecticide occasionally to control plant lice, and perhaps give the plants liquid foot. When the tops begin to turn yellow, let the pots dry, store them in the cellar, and plant the hardy bulbs in the garden in the Fall, repotting the freesias for forcing again.

MARCH

Now that the days are getting longer, house plants may be repotted so that they will make good growth during the Spring and Summer. Fibrous loam or leaf mold, and bone meal or sheep manure are good to mix with garden loam in making a compost. Florists will pot plants for a small amount.

Clumps of trailing arbutus, if kept moist and warm, can be brought into bloom indoors if plants with buds are selected.

It is not too soon to sow certain kinds of flower seeds indoors in boxes. Sow the China asters, especially the California Sunshine, and the wilt-resistant varieties—the new pink colored salvias, petunias, not forgetting the variety Theodosia, the verbenas Lander Glory and Beauty of Oxford hybrids and rustproof snapdragons.

The mulches over early Spring flower bulbs such as snowdrops and crocuses should be lifted so that the shoots can come through. Lighten the mulches over daffodils, tulips and other bulbs when they begin to push through, but keep a light covering over them.

Gloxinia bulbs can be started in pots at any time in a compost consisting of fibrous loam, leaf mold and sand. Keep the crown of the bulb at the surface of the soil.

Seeds of sweet peas can be started in the coldframe as soon as the soil is warmed through. They are not harmed by light frost. The seedlings should be potted as soon as they are large enough.

Tuberous rooted begonias should be started into growth by the middle of the month.

APRIL

When the ground in the flower garden is dry enough so that it can be worked and made fine, sow seeds of the hardiest annuals where they are to flower. The list includes the Shirley and California poppies, China pinks, candytuft, annual larkspur and annual chrysanthemums. At the end of the month sow seeds of snapdragons, calendulas, flowering tobacco, annual lupines and sweet alyssum in the garden.

One may start gladiolus corms in a coldframe now for early bloom. Corms can be set in the soil or started in pots so that they can be moved into the garden later.

Plant all kinds of garden roses at this time so that they may get their roots established before the weather gets too warm and dry. Prepare the soil to a depth of 18 inches for the plants. Hill them with soil when first planted for a period of ten days.

In building a rock garden, dig out the top soil and put in drainage before laying down the rocks. Tamp the soil very firmly in the interstices. Rocks should be at least one-third and better two-thirds under the ground.

All kinds of trees, shrubs and perennials can be planted when the ground is dry enough so that it will not cake. Perennial borders must be deeply prepared with a fertilizer mixed in the bottom layer of soil if the plants are to grow well and remain in good condition for several years.

MAY

Nearly all flower seeds can be sown in the garden during the next few weeks, except in the most northern states. Fine seeds like petunias may be kept from getting too dry by covering them with paper or burlap held in place with stones or soil. Remove the cover as soon as the seed germinates.

When seedlings that have been grown in a frame or in the house are set out, choose a quiet cloudy day if possible. Plant long-stemmed seedlings like cosmos with the roots an inch or so deep but avoid burying the crowns of plants that have their leaves borne in rosettes.

Although all perennials need an annual feeding, peonies benefit from it particularly. Cultivate one or two trowelfuls of any well-balanced fertilizer around each plant.

One may sow seeds of hardy annuals between tulip and daffodil bulbs before the plants get too high so as to have flowers after the bulbs have died down. Cultivate the soil between the plants with a hand tool, mixing in bone meal or some other fertilizer first. Annual larkspurs, poppies, California poppies, sweet alyssum and other annuals may be used.

California privet hedges that have spent the last year in recovery from the severe Winter of 1933-34 will make a quicker growth if fertilizer is scattered along the hedge and lightly spaded into the soil. The top of the hedge should be pruned even at this time so that it will become more bushy.

JUNE

Annuals may be sown now for late Summer bloom or where bulbs have finished flowering. Sow annual larkspurs, lupines, Shirley poppies and bachelor buttons where they are to bloom. Others to sow are annual gypsophila, calendulas, mignonette, alyssum and candytuft.

Many rock plants, as for instance the rock cress, Arabis alpinus, become very scraggly before the end of the Summer. After blooming, cut them back part way so that they will be bushier and more free flowering next year.

Rock plants like sedum, aubretia, arenaria, ground phlox and cerastium can be increased after flowering from cuttings or offsets. Set the cuttings in a frame in sandy soil and keep them constantly shaded.

Bedding plants of all kinds can be set out now. Water them thoroughly before transplanting. Keep a ball of soil around the roots.

Water all newly transplanted trees, shrubs and perennials. Mulch the ground around azaleas, rhododendrons and mountain laurel with leaf mold, peat moss or even grass clippings.

Continue to plant gladioli every two weeks in order to have a long season of bloom.

Set the house plants outdoors in the shade of a tree or in some sheltered spot for the Summer. They will keep better when plunged to the rim of the pot in the ground. Palms and ferns in particular object to strong sunlight.

JULY

Keep window boxes cultivated and watered regularly. Pulverized sheep manure watered into the soil now will do the plants good.

Orders should be placed for pansy and English daisy seed to have on hand for early August sowing.

Hardy chrysanthemums may well be pinched back at the tips to make them bushier and more productive of flowers. Keep the plants well watered.

Pure grass clippings make a good mulch for strawberries, raspberries and other fruits and plants, but clippings from weedy lawns will only introduce more weeds into the garden.

Keep side shoots on tomatoes trained to stakes pinched off to get a high yield of fruit.

Columbines in many varieties can be grown from seed which should be sown a quarter of an inch deep and firmly pressed into the soil. The seed takes three to four weeks to germinate.

There is still time to plant many vegetables such as kale, sweet corn, carrots, bush squash, beans, turnips, swiss chard, beets and endive.

Roses will need a great amount of water from now on, but it should be applied early in the day.

Weekly spraying of the rose plants is most important.

Little use of the lawn mower should be made this month unless there happens to be an abundance of rain.

AUGUST

To get dried sprays of gypsophila for the Winter, cut them now when in full bloom. Either the single variety or Bristol Fairy may be used. Cut the sprays on a hot day and dry them in the shade. Store the thoroughly dried material in cartons lined with paper to keep it clean and dry.

Sow pyrethrum seeds in a shaded seed bed now to get flowering size plants for next Spring. Home-saved seeds from dark varieties rarely produce many dark seedlings. Seed from specialists is better. Keep the ground cultivated between the young plants and set them out in the garden in September or early October.

Seed of Shasta daisies can be sown like that of pansies. Transplant the seedlings in Autumn to their permanent location. Home-saved seed should be taken only from plants that produced perfect flowers this year.

The chinch bug, a tiny dark insect with a light band around the middle, may be turning the lawn brown. Spray the infested areas with a nicotine solution made up at the rate of two teaspoonfuls to a gallon of water, or use a proprietary dust containing rotenone and sulphur.

Replant iris clumps that have become too thick to flower well. Discard rhizomes that are rotting or that contain borers. With large clumps dig out only the center and replace it with fresh compost.

Spray rhododendrons and mountain laurels, infested with the lace bug on the undersides of the leaves, with a solution of nicotine sulphate and soap or similar proprietary materials.

SEPTEMBER

Oriental poppies may be moved successfully now. Old plants may be divided.

A nicotine spray will subdue the lice which collect on golden glow, nasturtiums and other plants at this season.

The making of a new lawn can be carried out within the next three or four weeks. Lawns planted in the Fall usually give better results than those seeded in the Spring.

Evergreens may be set out now with success, but should be well mulched and given plenty of water. It is also very important that the tops be sprayed frequently.

Bleeding heart can be divided safely only in the Fall. Separate in the same way as peonies.

No time should be lost in dividing Japanese, Siberian and bearded irises. The foliage should be cut back one-half.

If lily-of-the-valley plants have become over-crowded and flower rather sparsely, the entire bed should be dug up at this time and the larger pips or roots reset two or three inches apart and just under the surface.

Divide the plant peonies this month so that they will become well established before the hard frost. Mix a handful of bone meal with the soil around each plant and supply plenty of water; select strong divisions with three to five eyes and set them with the top-most eye about two inches below the surface.

OCTOBER

Most trees, shrubs, vines and evergreens may be planted this month. If possible, mulch liberally with well-rotted manure.

Order rose bushes for Fall planting. They will be delivered in November. Stake out the beds at this time, digging them deeply and enriching the lower layer of soil with old manure, bone meal or some other organic fertilizer.

Rock garden plants are best not set out after the middle of the month but new rock gardens can be built at any time this Fall and the ground allowed to settle in preparation for Spring planting.

Continue to plant peonies and hardy bulbs. The Regal lily can be used effectively between peonies and other large growing perennials or among rhododendrons and mountain laurel.

Marigolds, calendulas, flowering tobacco and nasturtiums may be taken up from the garden with a ball of soil and potted for indoor blooming.

Mark bulbs and roots dug up for Winter storage and also the spot where Spring bulbs and perennials are being planted.

Take in the house plants promptly, potting them in a good compost and keeping them in an enclosed porch or protected place so that they may gradually become accustomed to house conditions.

Work a few handfuls of bone meal around each peony plant. Bone meal may also be applied to the rose garden now.

Trilliums, cypripediums, the cowslip, the bleeding heart and other plants intended for forcing for Spring shows are best potted or put in boxes of light soil during the Fall and stored in a cool place.

NOVEMBER

Mulching materials should be provided now to be used as soon as the ground freezes hard—not before. Salt marsh hay, buckwheat hulls and peat moss are excellent materials to use. The first named is now being put up in bales, and is much better than straw.

All classes of rose bushes can be set out during the next few weeks. Plant them with the knuckle an inch or two below ground. Protect the roots always from drying in the air. Water the plants heavily when they are set. Soil hilled around the stems will keep them from drying.

Pot-grown roses that were set out during the past year may have their roots wound close together. The bushes may be dug before the ground freezes, and reset with the roots spread down and out.

Tulips planted six to eight inches deep late in the season will follow bulbs planted four inches deep and set out earlier next Spring.

It is a good plan to put the lawn mower in order at this season of the year. Clean the blades, and have it sharpened so that it will be ready for use next Spring.

In the house, keep gloxinias green as long as possible, but when they turn yellow let them rest naturally, withholding water. Store the bulbs in pots, in a warm cellar until late in the Winter, when they may be reotted for next year.

Take cuttings of the Star of Bethlehem, Campanula isophylla, which will root readily in sand and make strong plants for next year.

DECEMBER

Mulch the strawberry plants with straw, strawy manure, or other litter just as soon as the ground freezes, which frequently is not until well into December.

All newly set trees should be staked, in order to prevent their being blown down or tipped over by heavy snows.

This is the best month in which to prune the grape vines. If you wish more plants, use the prunings for cuttings.

Why not do some grafting next Spring? Now is the time to select the cions; tie them in bundles, label them, pack in damp sand or moss, and store in a cool place.

If the rhododendrons have not been mulched, do this work at once. It is best to use leaves, and cover with a layer four to six inches deep. Evergreens will protect the foliage from burning, or a wooden shield on the southwest side is equally good. This helps protect the plants from bleak winds.

Japanese lilies may still be planted in the garden. Speciosums and auratums may be potted singly and kept under the bench in the conservatory for forcing into bloom later. Both these lilies must be forced slowly.

Soil should be heaped around buddleias and various evergreen barberries, such as Berberis julianæ and B. verruculosa, in Massachusetts. Hydrangea quercifolia and the Polyantha rose, Rodhatte, will need the same treatment.

ANNUAL MEETING

NOVEMBER 18, 1936

Two hundred and eighteen members attended the Annual Meeting which was held on Wednesday, November 18, 1936, at 3 P. M., at 1600 Arch Street, Philadelphia. The president, Mr. C. Frederick C. Stout, was in the chair. Announcement was made of the election of the following members to serve on the Executive Council for the next three years: Mrs. William T. Elliott, Mrs. Alvan Markle, Jr., Mr. F. E. Dixon, Mr. Fairman R. Furness, Mr. Samuel S. Pennock, Mr. William J. Serrill, and Mr. C. Frederick C. Stout.

The president gave a summary of the Society's activities during the last year.

An illustrated lecture upon Japan was the special event of the afternoon. This was presented by Mrs. Arthur Hoyt Scott, a member of the Executive Council. Mrs. Scott was a member of the Garden Club of America group that made a pilgrimage to Japan in the Summer of 1935, under particularly favorable circumstances, and she recounted a delightful narrative of her garden experiences on that trip. Following her talk on Japan, Mrs. Scott consented to tell of her visit to France last Summer, again as a member of the Garden Club of America delegation, and she showed most interesting pictures of French chateaux and gardens to illustrate her remarks.

THE REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

I wish at this time to express my thanks to the various Committees and their Chairmen through whose efforts the activities of the Society have been so ably conducted this past year, and also to express the gratitude of the officers to our members who have by their interest and enthusiasm made our work a real source of pleasure instead of the dull routine performance of duties which it might otherwise have become.

Although the income of the Society has been drastically reduced by about Ten Thousand Dollars during the last five years, there has been a very careful cutting of expenditures to correspond with the reduction of income, and no activities have been curtailed seriously. This year, as in the past, the budget has been balanced, and we were able to start the new fiscal year which began October 1st with a clean slate.

There is little change to report in the number of members this November as compared with last. A year ago we had 3,247 members and we now have 3,258, a net gain of eleven members, made up of an increase of 350 members and a loss of 339 members. It is encouraging to report that among the total number added are sixteen Life Members, whose fees will increase our endowment fund by $800.

We were sorry to lose thirty-eight members by death during this past year, seven of whom were Life Members and one an Honorary Member. We also record with special sorrow the passing of one of the members of our Executive Council, Colonel J. Franklin McFadden, whose death occurred last July.

The periodical "Horticulture" has continued to go to our members twice a month, and our relations with our sister societies of Massachusetts and New York have been most harmonious. We have also cooperated to the best of our ability with local organizations who have allied interests and I am pleased to report that there have been sixty meetings of the Boards of such groups in our Council Room during the last year. Our own Council members have been generous in giving time and effort in representing us at meetings of other groups, both in the city and out-of-town. Among these out-of-town meetings, we were represented at a meeting of the Lily Committee in New York City in January, the Annual Meeting of the Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania in Hershey in April, the Garden Days at State College in the middle of October, and the Founders' Day Exercises at Swarthmore, on October 31st.

C. FREDERICK C. STOUT,
President.

SECRETARY'S REPORT FOR 1936

The first activity of 1936 was our regular lecture series consisting of five talks on Tuesday afternoons. In addition to these, the Lecture Committee arranged a special course of three subscription lectures in Plant Material. The Society also cooperated in an evening course of practical lectures on Tuesday evenings during the winter, sponsored by the Philadelphia Branch of the National Association of Gardeners, and given, as were our other lectures, in the Insurance Company of North America Building, 1600 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

In February, the special committee for the Philadelphia Flower Show combined with the Garden Club Federation of Pennsylvania in presenting a special two days' course of lectures for flower show exhibitors. This course was well attended by our members and helped defray the committee's expenses for the amateur section of the Show (including the garden club exhibits) which is under the direct supervision of our Society each year. The Society had every reason to be proud of this section and of the Show as a whole. During Flower Show week, a special luncheon was arranged for our members who had the honor of being addressed by the directors of the three leading botanical gardens of the East and by our own Dr. J. Horace McFarland.

On three Saturday afternoons in May and early June, our members had the opportunity of visiting thirteen beautiful suburban gardens, and according to our records there was a total attendance of 3,905 members and their guests, with the highest number, 396, reported at Mrs. Alba Johnson's estate in Rosemont. In addition to these outdoor events, we also had the privilege in May of attending a small but very beautiful Orchid Exhibition, staged by directors of the American Orchid Society in Philadelphia.

During the Spring, the Committee on Garden Awards visited forty-one gardens and selected ten which they thought worthy of special honor by the Society. Their report is included in the Year Book.

There was a recess for most of our activities during the Summer, although Mr. Rust was available for garden visits and consultation as usual, and he was almost as busy as during the Spring months. The Library, also, was used consistently. I should like to report a gift to the Society from Mrs. J. Franklin McFadden of Colonel McFadden's collection of gardening books—88 volumes in excellent condition. Another interesting gift to the Society this year was a projector for lantern slides, together with forty-two foreign slides, presented by Mrs. Caspar W. Hacker, a former member of our Council.

Our Exhibition Committee was fortunate in securing the cooperation of The Pennsylvania Railroad Company for our Fall Flower and Dahlia Show, and as a result of the joint efforts of the Railroad and the Society, together with the assistance of employees of other railroads, a splendid Dahlia Show was presented in late September in the Thirtieth Street Station of The Pennsylvania Railroad—a magnificent setting for a beautiful Show.

During the year, 1215 members visited our offices and 1,138 used the Library. This is most gratifying but we want the number to grow each year so that our officers and staff may become better acquainted with you and stimulated by your interest and so that you, by closer acquaintance with our services, may avail yourselves of them in greater degree.

JOHN C. WISTER,
Secretary.

1936 GARDEN AWARD, SILVER MEDAL
DR. AND MRS. EDWIN SHOEMAKER, BROOKSIDE FARM, PAOLI, PA.

REPORT OF THE EXHIBITION COMMITTEE FOR 1936

The Society participated actively in the Philadelphia Flower Show held in the Commercial Museum from March 23rd to 28th, 1936. A special Committee, under the Chairmanship of Mrs. Otho E. Lane and a corps of devoted and experienced garden enthusiasts, prepared the schedules and supervised the placing and judging of all exhibits in the arrangement and other classes in the section sponsored by this Society. Each day this Committee staged new arrangements in order to insure the freshness of the material used and likewise to prolong the delight and interest of the nearly 100,000 visitors to the Show.

It has been somewhat of a problem to determine the best location for the Dahlia and Fall Flower Shows of the Society in order to accommodate the greatest number of exhibitors and to attract the desired attendance. It was thought advisable to seek a Philadelphia location for the 1936 Show and, through the courtesy of the executive officers of The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the use of the main concourse of their magnificent Thirtieth Street Station in Philadelphia was granted to this Society. In addition the officers and employees of The Pennsylvania Railroad Company joined with the members and friends of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society in making this one of the most beautiful and popular Dahlia Shows that has ever been staged in Philadelphia. Exhibits were received from many surrounding States and from as far west as the Pacific Coast. Not only Philadelphians, and residents of adjacent territory, were enabled to enjoy this free exhibit of outstanding blooms but the traveling public was also given an opportunity for the same enjoyment. Favorable comments upon the excellence of the Show and its location were received from widespread sources. Officials of the Japanese Government Railways were so impressed with the possibilities for the encouragement of gardening among their employees that a special bulletin on this Show was disseminated throughout Japan. It is expected that this will be the forerunner of many similar floral exhibitions sponsored by the personnel of the railroads in America. The Exhibition Committee is very grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Fell; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Morse; Mr. H. E. Wolcott; and Mr. William A. Whittaker, as representatives of the Railroad Company, for their splendid assistance and cooperation in making this Show so eminently successful.

The usual Hardy Chrysanthemum Show was omitted in 1936 due to the unfavorable growing season and to the fact that a Chrysanthemum exhibition was being held at Swarthmore Arboretum to which our members were invited.

Respectfully submitted,

J. V. HARE,
Chairman.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON GARDEN AWARDS FOR 1936

The Committee on Garden Awards visited forty-one gardens in 1936 and upon its recommendation the following awards were made

A Silver Medal to Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Parker Robinson, St. Davids, Pa., for their fine estate. The mansion is set in the seclusion of an extensive woodland. The approach, after a winding driveway, is through a lawn of impressive dignity, with perfect turf and old trees. The garden, at a lower level, is primarily a rose garden—a large open square with beds of elaborate design, and the roses, planted in solid colors, in the very pink of condition. (The Committee's visit was prior to the seasonal advent of the Japanese beetle). The border of this rose garden is appropriately planted with perennials, and beyond this planting, separated by a low hedge, is a grass walk studded here and there with exquisitely treated small enclosures, which form a pleasant contrast to the open space of the rose garden. This whole garden is enclosed by mounting shrubbery flanked by tall forest trees. This place, in the opinion of the Committee, warrants the award of the highest class of medal which is available to the Committee this year.

A Silver Medal to Mr. and Mrs. Radcliffe Cheston, Jr., "Sandy Run," Orelan, Pa. An ancient, historic mansion set on the bank of a clear, swiftly running stream, forms the centre feature of this attractive home-like place. From the terrace one crosses the stream and descends to a circular high-walled enclosure, with a central pool and statue, the border planted as a green garden. Returning to the terrace, one finds, extending from the end of the house, a garden of unusual beauty, with a pleasant prospect of open fields beyond. The stream, which borders this garden is canal-like, with its high banks, and this gains the idyllic quality which always attaches to canal scenery. It is difficult to convey in words the secret of the charm which old age, good taste, and perfect up-keep have succeeded in imparting to this home.

A Silver Medal to Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel Paul, "Box Hill," Radnor, Pa. This is a handsome, spacious place, with fine lawns and trees. A large walled garden, of rectangular shape, is beautifully planted and perfectly maintained with shrubbery and perennials. From the terrace at the back of the house, the lawn slopes rapidly to a charming wooded glen. The terrace is decorated with numerous potted plants, and at its far end is placed a charming small green herb garden, with beautifully colored walks of cedar chips, and with the box-bordered central beds studded with sprawling strawberry plants, quite unique in effect.

A Silver Medal to Dr. and Mrs. Edwin Shoemaker, "Brookside Farm," Paoli, Pa. A wild flower garden placed on the slope of a wooded hillside, with a free-flowing stream at its base, is the feature of this comfortable country home set in the charming scenery of the Chester Valley. And such an elaborate, thoroughly representative collection of native plants, so beautifully grown! It is veritably a botanist's paradise! Even some of the rarer plants and ferns find a place along the narrow pathways which criss-cross on the face of this hillside. This result is achieved by extensive study and hard work on the part of the enthusiastic owners, who are well equipped with facilities for the testing of soils, and attention to other necessary technical details.

A Silver Medal to Mrs. John R. Valentine, "Highland Farm," Bryn Mawr, Pa. The residence, an old stone farmhouse type of building, faces an irregular gently-sloping enclosed lawn with borders showing a splendid collection of spring bulbs—tulips, daffodils, and narcissi of great variety, and good blending colors. A grove enclosed summer house looks over a brook flowing from a spring—its source—to a pool of irregular circular shape. Ferns, wild plants and many named varieties of narcissi beautify the borders of spring, brook and pond. The mellowness of old age is on the moss-covered steps and ivy-grown walks of this place. With nothing formal or pretentious, it is bathed in the atmosphere which grows out of simplicity and the love of nature.

A Bronze Medal to Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Allan Poe, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa. The wall-enclosed rectangular lawn placed at the end of this modern Renaissance type of dwelling house, possesses a distinction which is unusual. This must be due to its perfect proportions, to the height and character of its enclosing walls, to the statue, facing the house, at the far end, and to the low planting at the bases of the walls. A large garden beyond one of these walls is brilliant with bloom. The whole place is in perfect condition.

A Bronze Medal to Mr. and Mrs. John Groff, West Chester, Pa., for their back-yard garden. This is a perfect example of what may be done to beautify the small rear yard of a dwelling located on a village street. The skill with which, by planting, neighboring eye-sores have been screened, and the taste and fine feeling displayed in the design and planting of this little garden are worthy of praise

A Certificate of Merit to Mrs. Edward Roberts, Paoli, Pa., for the good judgment displayed in the planting of her beautiful sloping lawn with its lake and pool, and for the perfect order in which her grounds are maintained

A Certificate of Merit to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Kelly, "Little Gardens," Lansdowne, Pa., in recognition of the good taste and skill displayed in the lay-out and planting of their small garden. This extends alongside of and back of the house; and in the small grove at the end of the yard there is a garden of wild flowers. This garden is much admired.

A Certificate of Merit to Mr. and Mrs. William R. Breck, Rosemont, Pa. The garden and lawn at the back of the house are admirable in their design, and the planting is beautiful. The shrubbery has been placed so as to make the most effective use of the ground, and to shut out neighboring structures, so that the garden is desirably secluded. It is evident that much thought has gone into the development of this garden.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM J. SERRILL,

Chairman.

REPORT OF THE LECTURE COMMITTEE FOR 1936

January 7, 1936. Dr. A. B. Stout gave a delightfully instructive lecture on "Daylilies: Old and New," and astonished his audience with the perfection achieved both in form and color.

January 21, 1936. Mrs. J. Norman Henry thrilled her audience with her recounting of her experiences "Exploring and Plant Collecting Beyond the Frontier in Northern British Columbia." The hardships, exigencies and surprises of her trip were graphically outlined. An exhibition of photographs of city gardens was staged in the Auditorium by the Society of Little Gardens, and the pictures were on view before and after the lecture.

February 4, 1936. Dr. Arthur C. Pillsbury—"Growing Plants Without Soil or Cultivation." This title made us believe in fairies—we who have toiled with soil and cultivation—but his demonstrations proved it could be done, with patience and perseverance.

February 18, 1936. Mrs. Mary Vaux Walcott—"Wild Flowers of the Canadian Rockies." We have full knowledge of the distinction Mrs. Walcott's experiences with wild flowers has achieved. The Smithsonian Institution has given her high acclaim in honors and space—her lecture impressed us additionally.

March 3, 1936. Mr. J. E. Spingarn—"Clematis for American Gardens." This well-known authority made us all Clematis enthusiasts, and he prepared a selection of those best suited to American gardens for the members who wanted a broader knowledge and appreciation of these more than interesting plants.

These lectures comprised our regular 1936 series and are a part of the privilege of membership in The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

A special course on plant material, plant selection and shrub and tree protection was presented during January and February, 1936, at a subscription price of $2.50 for the five lectures. For those who were privileged to attend the course, it was fascinating, and the ease and informality of the talks made it an additional pleasure. The speakers and subjects were as follows: Dr. Frank A. Schrepfer—"Better Trees For Landscape and Garden," "Selecting Shrubs For Landscape and Garden," and "The Newer Perennials and Garden Plants." Mr. H. Gleason Mattoon—"Insects of Trees and Shrubs, and Their Control," and "Diseases of Trees and Shrubs, and Their Control."

An evening course of practical and instructive subjects was sponsored by the Philadelphia Branch of the National Association of Gardeners, on Tuesdays, at 8 p. m. An enrollment fee of $1.00 was charged and there was a gratifying attendance at the six lectures.

The Lecture Committee in 1937 is introducing a special instructive course which is designed to attract amateur gardeners. The Committee hopes that through the instruction offered in the lectures, these new gardeners may be spared the bitter disappointments and readjustments which usually fall to the lot of the beginner. The course starts with the proper preparation of the soil, then takes up the sowing of the seed, planting bulbs and rhizomes, pruning and planting trees and shrubs, planning the mixed border in order to have flowers from spring until frost, and ends with a round table discussion of various gardening problems. A small fee is charged for this course, and it is planned to present a similar group of elementary lectures every year for the benefit of the amateur.

Respectfully submitted,

ANNA ELLIOTT,

(Mrs. William T. Elliott),

Chairman.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE FOR 1936

Gleaning horticultural knowledge through the reading of books is an exceedingly pleasant pastime, especially during the winter when it is a wonderful outlet for all gardeners.

Forty-two hundred and fifty books on all branches of gardening are now in our Library. Two hundred new books have been added during 1936, and of these ninety-nine were gifts. We extend to the givers of these books our most grateful thanks. Cooperation and substantial help of this kind are deeply appreciated.

Garden Clubs and members of the Society, we hope, will continue to step forward this coming season and help us build up our Library by giving us books and checks with which to purchase books. No check can be too large and none will be too small to help us with our objective.

During the year 1221 persons visited the Library, and 876 books were taken out by members. Eighty-four books were mailed to members. We are always glad to cooperate and supply books by mail to those of our members who are unable to come in and secure them. The only charge for this service is the postage.

We are looking forward with pleasure to seeing more members using the Library than ever this coming year. We hope they will come often, stay a long time, and make themselves "at home."

Respectfully submitted,

MARY G. HENRY,

(Mrs. J. Norman Henry),

Chairman.

CONSULTANT IN HORTICULTURE

The services of the Consultant in Horticulture, Mr. David Rust, are available to all members, the only expense being the actual transportation charge when gardens are visited. In addition to visiting gardens, Mr. Rust may be consulted at the offices of the Society on Mondays (except when Flower Shows are being held) and on other week-days except Saturdays, by appointment.

Each member who has a garden should arrange for two visits a year, as the expert eye can see trouble in its initial stage and prevent future worry and expense. Telephone consultations are not satisfactory, because in order to properly diagnose a case, the consultant, like the physician, must see the "patient."

During 1936 Mr. Rust visited 51 gardens of members, gave advice to 100 members in the office, to 107 by telephone and to 74 by letter. He presented eight lectures before Garden Clubs, and assisted in judging 12 flower shows. The twelve principal subjects about which he was consulted were: Spraying; Perennials; Outdoor Roses; Lawns; Evergreens; Shrubs; Pruning; Boxwood; Rhododendrons; Japanese Beetle; Orchards; Moving Trees.

EXTENSION PLANS OF THE SOCIETY FOR 1937

In the effort that is now being made to increase our membership and our usefulness in the field of horticulture throughout the State, there will be issued in 1937 a quarterly publication entitled "Pennsylvania Gardens," the first number of which will appear in March. This is but another voice of the Society speaking in an effort to call to the attention of our fellow-citizens of Pennsylvania the service of the Society in promoting one of our most interesting and essential vocations and sciences.

Along this same line, you have already been notified that we added to our staff on January 1, 1937, a Field Secretary, Miss Anne B. Wertsner, whose principal efforts will be directed toward making the privileges of the Society available to members outside of the Philadelphia area.

This new work of the Society is being developed by the Extension Committee, headed by Dr. J. Horace McFarland, who will also edit "Pennsylvania Gardens." The members of Dr. McFarland's committee are Mr. W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., Mr. J. V. Hare, Mrs. Thomas Newhall, Mrs. Walter King Sharpe, Mr. William J. Serrill and Professor E. I. Wilde.

We hope that our members will whole-heartedly approve of this new undertaking, and will show their approval by acquainting their non-member, garden-minded friends throughout the State with the opportunities that are being made available to them through the efforts of the Extension Committee.

I LOVE A TREE

BY SAMUEL N. BAXTER
Arboriculturist—Fairmount Park

When I pass on to my reward,
Whatever that may be,
I'd like my friends to think of me
As one who loved a tree.

I may not have a statesman's poise,
Nor thrill a crowd with speech,
But I can benefit mankind
If I set out a beech.

If I transplant a sapling oak
To rear its mighty head,
'Twill shade and shelter those who come
Long after I am dead.

If in the park I plant an elm,
Where children come to play,
To them 'twill be a childhood shrine
That will not soon decay.

Or if I plant a tree with fruit,
On which the birds may feed,
I've helped to foster feathered friends,
And that's a worthy deed.

For winter, when the days grow short
And spirits may run low,
I'd plant a pine upon the 'scape,
'Twould lend a cheering glow.

I'd like a tree to mark the spot
Where I am laid to rest,
To me 'twould be the epitaph
That I would love the best.

And though not carved upon a stone
For those who come to see,
My friends would know that resting here
Is one who loved a tree.

HARDY CHRYSANTHEMUMS AT SWARTHMORE

By JOHN C. WISTER

In the 1933 YEAR BOOK I reported the establishment of a great collection of hardy outdoor Chrysanthemums by the Arthur Hoyt Scott Horticultural Foundation at Swarthmore. A classification of type, color, and season, and an alphabetical list of 218 varieties was published.

It now seems proper to report the progress of the collection during the years 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1936. These seasons have varied greatly in length in accordance with the earliness or lateness of severe freezing weather, and in the quality of flowers produced, in accordance with the growing conditions of the different summers. The testing of varieties has given a basis for worth-while conclusions as to the adaptability of the many different varieties to our local conditions.

During this time many additional varieties have been added. Some have been kept for the permanent collection but many more have been discarded because of lack of vigor or frost resistance. Still others were killed by severe winters, and unless the quality of the flower was so fine we just could not get on without it, the verdict of the winter was accepted because we did not wish to bother with tender kinds. After all only the hardiest varieties will fulfill the requirements of our gardeners.

The complete list now numbers 363 introduced varieties and 22 unIntroduced varieties, a total of 385. Of these 211 varieties are being retained for further trial.

The outstanding event of the past four seasons of the Chrysanthemum world was the introduction of the fine hybrids of the hardy species, Chrysanthemum coreana. Mr. Alexander Cumming, Jr., of the Bristol Nurseries, Bristol, Conn., was the originator and introducer of the first of these hybrids, and in 1936 he was followed by Mr. E. H. Michel of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., of Philadelphia. The first varieties were single but now some doubles are available. These new Korean hybrids are noteworthy for their absolute winter hardiness and for their earliness and freedom of bloom. The more than occasional winter killing of so-called hardy Chrysanthemums has been a tribulation to gardeners for years, and therefore it is very pleasing to see this really hardy type entering our gardens.

The new color classification which is herewith submitted is based on the division we have made in our own planting at Swarthmore. We have put together varieties of the same general type and have not always followed the older classifications when they did not seem to fit. It is, of course, impossible for anyone to state exactly where the line between buttons and pompons, or between pompons and large doubles should be drawn. Only varieties now in the collection are included, but most of the varieties which we have dropped will be found in the article published in the 1933 YEAR BOOK.

It is necessary to repeat that too much dependence cannot be placed on any statement of time of bloom. Such dates vary not only from year to year and from north to south but even in individual gardens. It is now definitely known that opening of Chrysanthemum flowers is determined by the shortening of the days. Many interesting experiments in covering plants with dark cloth for a portion of the day have resulted in bloom as early as the middle of August. The list gives the average date when the flowers have been open enough to be conspicuous.

I have always felt that any list of plants was incomplete if the names of the originators and the dates of introduction were not given. I am glad to be able to give this information in this year's alphabetical list, through the kindness of Mr. Elmer D. Smith of Adrian, Michigan. Mr. Smith, the Dean of American Chrysanthemum breeders and recent recipient of the Roland Medal of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, has kept records of introduction of Chrysanthemum varieties for over forty years. I must acknowledge also the help of Mr. Alexander Cumming, Jr., of Bristol, Conn., of Mr. E. H. Michel, of Riverton, N. J., of Mr. C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J. and many others.

So many people have asked where various varieties can be purchased that the source from which we got each variety is given. It seems proper to mention that some plants were gifts from institutions which do not sell plants, and further that many of the varieties purchased four or five years ago may already have been discarded by nurseries mentioned. The advent of the Korean hybrids has led to a very severe reduction of the older varieties.

The color description column gives only a very brief note of the general effect of the flower. It is impossible in a list such as this to attempt further description.

I hope the publication of this list will prove of interest to the members of the society and to those who have visited the Swarthmore collection. I am publishing it because I feel that such information should be put in permanent form to record the advent and the discarding of varieties, and to assist any future historians of the growth in popularity of the Chrysanthemum as a hardy outdoor flower as distinguished from the varieties grown either in green-houses or under artificial protection.

GARDEN CERTIFICATE, 1936
MRS. EDWARD ROBERTS, "CARNARVON," PAOLI, PA.

JANUARY

The pruning of trees and shrubs can be undertaken now, although many garden makers in the north prefer to wait until March.

The oxalis bulbs potted up in the Fall should be coming into bloom now. They will require plenty of sunlight and an abundance of water. The flowering season will be prolonged if a little commercial fertilizer is worked into the soil.

This is a good time to look over the willow and poplar trees and to cut out branches which are found to be infested with borers.

Greenhouse work includes the making of cuttings from fuchsias, heliotropes and stevias, always from young wood.

Geranium cuttings may be taken now, too, and seeds of verbenas, ageratum, petunias and Bellis perennis may be sown now, while hydrangeas intended for Easter blooming should be given gentle heat.

Tulip bulbs which have been rooted in a cellar or coldframe may be brought into heated rooms now. They make good growth after the turn of the year.

Hard wood cuttings may be made from garden shrubs, using the new wood. The cuttings should be reduced to six inches long, tied in bundles and packed in damp sawdust or peat moss, one end being exposed.

FEBRUARY

Plant seed of early asters by the end of February.

Black spots on the foliage of a rubber plant are usually an indication of poor drainage, causing sour soil. Repot with fresh, sandy, porous compost, with good drainage, after shaking the plant out of the old soil.

It often pays to wash off the soot which gathers on the leaves of evergreens in the Winter. Turn the hose on these plants during a warm, sunny interval.

A satisfactory soil to use in starting seeds is one made from equal parts of clean sand, ordinary loam, and a humus material such as granulated peat moss. Be sure it is free from weed seeds.

Trees girdled by rabbits should be wrapped to prevent the injured parts from drying excessively before bridge grafting can be performed in the Spring.

Now is the time for combating San José scale on fruit trees. Spraying with lime-sulphur or miscible oils is the most effective way of eradicating these pests.

Combinations of flowers for the Spring bulb garden deserve some fore-thought now. English daisies, forget-me-nots and pansies will combine well with the coloring of most tulips.

MARCH

A good mixture for seed boxes is made of sand, leaf-mold and well decayed fertilizer in equal proportions. An inch of sand or coarse soil should be placed in the bottom of the boxes to insure drainage.

Remember that an important part of seed sowing is proper labeling. Record the date of planting on this label, and when transplanting, add the date below.

Seeds of salvias, snapdragons and asters should be sown by the middle of March.

If seeds in boxes indoors are planted sparsely, much tedious thinning of the plants later on will be avoided.

March is the last month in which winter pruning can be done. Remove all dead wood and injured branches from ornamentals and fruit trees.

Wounds made by pruning, unless very small, should be painted over. White lead and linseed oil paint, free from turpentine, with a little lamp black added to darken the color, are satisfactory. Avoid creosote and coal tar products, as they injure the cambium layer.

Fruit trees should be grafted just before the buds swell.

APRIL

Sow annuals in a coldframe, preferably in paper pots or pots made of peat moss.

Plant gladiolus bulbs at two-week intervals in order to have a long season of bloom. Six inches is none too deep for large bulbs.

Sweet peas should be planted immediately, if they have not already gone into the ground. Bury them five inches deep in trenches and fill the trenches gradually as the plants grow.

Grow the English daisies, Bellis perennis, as an edging for the pansy bed or in a bed by itself. Plants must be purchased.

Set out orchard trees and small fruits as early as possible. If they cannot be planted as soon as they arrive, heel them in, which means digging a trench and setting the stock into it inclined at an angle, and with only the tops protruding, the trench then being filled in with earth. Handled in this way, trees and shrubs will keep well for a week or more.

Set out the strawberry bed this month, giving it a sunny location with well drained soil. Set the plants 16 inches apart in the rows, and be sure that the crowns are exactly level with the ground. At least a third of the roots should be trimmed off square with a pair of sharp scissors.

The litter which is removed from strawberry beds may be kept in the rows between the plants to mulch the ground and keep the berries from the earth. Strawberry plants which have been partly heaved out of the ground by the frost should be pressed back with the foot.

MAY

Peonies should be lightly fertilized just as the shoots are pushing through the soil. A complete chemical fertilizer is best.

As soon as danger of freezing is past hardy water lilies may be planted in the garden pool and the pool refilled. Use good garden soil for the lilies and feed with a complete chemical fertilizer or with well-rotted manure. Then fill the pool so that the water stands only two inches over the lilies and raise the water level as they grow.

Japanese anemones should be planted this month to be established by Fall. They must be kept well watered to develop good root systems. Once established they are reasonably hardy in protected locations, even in the North.

Include some of the useful herbs such as anise, dill, sorrel, caraway, sage and thyme in your garden. Thyme makes a good ground cover for banks or terraces where it is difficult to get grass to grow, but some kinds spread rapidly.

The Spring-flowering bulbs should be left undisturbed until the tops have turned yellow.

Annuals to take the place of the tulips and daffodils when they have finished blooming may be sown now between the rows. Marigolds, annual delphiniums, poppies, California poppies, nasturtiums and other annuals may be used.

Delphinium blacks can usually be prevented by dusting with either Massey dust or dry Bordeaux, applying it to the ground as well as to the plants.

JUNE

Irises should be carefully watched for signs of the iris borer in the leaves. Cut and burn all leaves on which it is found.

If worms appear on currant bushes, spray with arsenate of lead or Paris green until the fruit is formed. Then use hellebore or a pyrethrum spray.

Lilacs may be pruned at the end of the flowering season. Dead blossoms and suckers should be removed.

It is not too late to sow the seeds of many of the quick growing annuals.

The blooming stalks of irises should be cut as soon as the flowers wither. Do not allow them to go to seed.

This is the best time to sow perennial seeds. It is desired to sow them in a coldframe, but they can be sown in an open seed bed. Remember that not all perennials come true from seed.

Privet hedges will need pruning again this month. It is only by frequent trimming during the growing season that a hedge remains attractive.

A mulch of peat moss on the rose bed conserves the moisture in the soil and seems to be effective in preventing the spread of black spot and powdery mildew.

Continue to spray or dust roses every week or ten days to control black spot and powdery mildew. Do this work before a rain when possible.

JULY

Success with sweet peas in hot weather depends on keeping the ground moist and the flowers picked.

Remove the seed heads from peonies, but do not cut the foliage. An application of a complete fertilizer such as 5-8-7 scratched lightly into the soil will improve the blooms next year.

The taller growing flowering plants will be benefited by staking to prevent damage by wind and rain. This applies particularly to delphiniums, foxgloves and dahlias. The stakes should be set in place early.

Care should be exercised in mowing the lawn this month. Unless the season is unusually wet, only an occasional mowing is necessary during the Summer and then the mower should be set high.

Most climbing roses are best pruned as soon as they have finished blooming. Those which send up new canes from the roots should have most of the old canes removed. Those which bloom on laterals need not be pruned until later in the season, when only the old lateral branches should be removed to within an inch or two of the cane stem.

It is much easier to keep plants free from disease than to control the disease when established. Keep roses and all plants that are subject to mildew, black spot or other fungus diseases sprayed or dusted with a good fungicide.

AUGUST

Plant Madonna lilies as soon as the bulbs are available. Those from the north of France will not reach this country until September, but American-grown bulbs are often ready in August.

Buy and plant colchicums and Fall crocuses as soon as they can be obtained. Use the Fall crocuses in the rock garden if you desire, but do not put the colchicums there, as the leaves, which will come next Spring, are too large for such a location.

Continue to divide and plant irises, but remember that the Japanese irises dislike lime and that they should be planted deeper than the bearded irises.

Divide your Oriental poppies now if this work is necessary. If you are buying new plants, this is the ideal time to set them out. If you wait until Spring, you will need to use potted plants.

Plant delphinium seeds, hollyhock seeds and the seeds of forget-me-nots.

Put bulbs of the Autumn daffodil, Sternbergia lutea, into the ground as soon as they are available. Plant them about four inches deep and protect the bulbs when Winter comes. If planted early, they will bloom before frost this year.

Order daffodils at once. They need to be planted much earlier than many other bulbs.

Plant roots of Doronicum caucasicum now when they are dormant. They will make good-sized plants by next Spring and be very certain to bloom.

SEPTEMBER

This is the best month for planting narcissi of all kinds. The sooner they go into the ground the better.

Practically all of the early-flowering perennials may be set out this month. It is better to set out late-blooming plants in the Spring.

September is the ideal month for dividing and planting peonies. It is important that they be planted only two inches deep but with an allowance for the settling of the soil in newly made beds.

The lily-of-the-valley gives best results when separated every three or four years. This work is best done in early Autumn. The strongest crowns should be selected and planted three inches apart each way, just below the surface.

Although this is a good time to plant evergreens, it is a mistake to think that they will grow in poor soil or exposed situations. They need good ground and some protection. Peat moss or leaf mold dug into the soil is especially valuable when planting evergreens.

Small plants of calendulas, lantanas, bedding begonias, petunias and geraniums potted up now will grow and flower in the living room when cold weather comes. It is best that they should become well established while the weather is still warm.

OCTOBER

The final planting of daffodils should be made at once. This is also true of the Madonna lily.

Tulip planting may be started as soon as the bulbs arrive from now on, although mid-October is early enough.

Bulbs planted this month should be mulched lightly but not until after the ground freezes.

In sections where field mice prey on tulip bulbs, of which they are fond, it may be necessary to put the bulbs in wire cages, although the use of substances offensive to rodents is the modern plan.

Slow-acting fertilizers should be used with bulbs planted in the Autumn, as growth will be started early in the Spring. Well-rotted barnyard manure is excellent, but bone meal is a very satisfactory fertilizer for Autumn use, because it is slow acting.

This is a good time to feed ornamental trees, using a formula indicated for that purpose.

There is still time for making over the perennial bed, and it is not too late to divide and move peonies.

Slow-acting fertilizers may be applied to the perennial border at this time and lightly worked in or covered with a thin layer of peat moss.

There are differences of opinion about fertilizers to use on roses at this season, but no mistake can be made in buying well-rotted barnyard manure or bone meal. It is better to use bone meal at this season than in the Spring.

NOVEMBER

Finish planting tulips, at least in the northern part of the country.

Roses may be planted now. Many growers prefer Fall planting.

There is still time to move or set out deciduous trees and shrubs. It is late for evergreens.

Cuttings of the various shrubs, particularly forsythia and philadelphus, will root readily in the Spring if kept buried in damp sand in a coldframe or cellar during the Winter.

Ground bone is a good fertilizer to apply to the lawn in the Autumn.

Clean up and burn all garden refuse. This is particularly important in sections where the European corn borer has become established.

It is wise to remove the old leaves from peonies, larkspurs, hollyhocks and foxgloves.

It is better to purchase ferns and other foliage plants for the house now instead of later.

If pansies started in August can be enclosed with boards and a sash placed over them, they will bloom earlier than pansies left unprotected. There should be a heavy covering of leaves under the glass.

Place your order for Japanesee lily bulbs immediately. They are in great demand this year.

Be sure that your choice garden plants bear permanent labels.

Mark the spot where perennials like mallows, which are late in starting, have been planted.

DECEMBER

Mulching material may be applied to the perennial border, the rose gardens and the bulb plantings as soon as the ground is frozen hard.

Lily bulbs should go into the ground as soon as they are received, if that is possible. They become soft if exposed to the air very long. Some growers pot them up and set them away in a cool place until Spring.

Lily-of-the-valley pips can be forced easily now if a temperature from 75 to 80 degrees can be maintained for a week or so. Prepared pips from the seed store are better than plants taken from the garden.

Pansies and English daisies to be wintered outside should be well covered with straw or leaves when cold weather has become established, using a few boards to keep the covering in place. Plants placed in coldframes will come into bloom earlier in the Spring or may be forced in the house in Winter.

It is customary to cut down the hardy chrysanthemums at this season, but if the tops are left in place, they will help to hold snow, which is the best mulching material for them.
